National Perspectives on Housing Rights Scott Leckie, 2021-10-18 More than one billion people around the world do not have adequate housing How far does human rights law help to remedy this problem What measures must governments take to protect people against housing rights violations What are the strengths and weaknesses of human rights law in the housing area Is the current law enough or are new laws necessary These and many other questions are addressed in the various chapters contained in National Perspectives on Housing Rights While most coverage of economic social and cultural rights has tended to focus on international standards and principles this book examines the more challenging question of how housing rights are implemented at the national and local level Chapters from recognised housing rights practitioners from Brazil Canada India Kenya Mexico Nigeria Philippines South Africa the US and elsewhere provide some of the first national level legal analyses of the implementation of housing rights standards recognised under international law A foreword by Nelson Mandela and a preface by international legal scholar Professor Philip Alston provide interesting perspectives on the fundamental role of housing rights within the broader human rights field

The Right to housing in law and society Nico Moons, 2018-05-16 From the very first negotiations of the International Covenant on Economic Social and Cultural Rights half a century ago to the present day socio economic rights have often been regarded as less enforceable than civil and political rights The right to adequate housing even though protecting one of the most basic needs of human beings has not escaped this classification Despite its strong foundations in international regional and domestic legislation many people are still deprived of one or more of the different key elements that comprise adequate housing How then can international human rights theory and case law be developed into effective vehicles at the domestic level Rather than focusing merely on possibilities for individualized relief through the court system The Right to Housing in Law and Society looks into more effective socio economic rights realization by addressing both conceptual and practical stumbling blocks that hinder a more structural progress at the national level The Flemish and Belgian housing legislation and policy are used to highlight the problems and illustrate the pathways here presented While first and foremost legal in its approach the book also offers a more sociological perspective on the functioning of the right to housing in practice It shows the latest state of knowledge on the topic and will be of interest to researchers academics policymakers and students in the fields of international socio economic rights law and human rights law more generally
