

A Salutation to "High Bonnet"

"Everything Idwal Jones writes is charged with a special tantalizing flavor, a kind of exotic earthiness, and High Bonnet is to my mind the most magical of all. I don't know exactly what Idwal Jones does to words to make them come alive again, after they have been numbed by the average careless usage of most writers now. . . but he can make our best-known localities into something rich and strange, and bring out rustic glowings in the dullest polysyllables.

"High Bonnet is exciting and entertaining, and it titillates most if not all of our somewhat overworked senses. The stories inside the story are so amazing that they seem perfectly logical, and prehistoric straits and unknown villages make our present way of living at once more bearable and more astonishingly ridiculous.

"High Bonnet will tease the palate of the mind. . . and that is one of the important things, now when it is so plain that man cannot live by bread alone. It is a nourishing as well as stimulating thing to read, because Idwal Jones writes about food and feeds more than the bodies of his fabulous characters."
