Mobile Phone Panel Surveys in Developing Countries Andrew Dabalen, Alvin Etang, Johannes Hoogeveen, Elvis Mushi, Youdi Schipper, Johannes von Engelhardt, 2016-07-12 Household survey data are very useful for monitoring living conditions of citizens of any country In developing countries a lot of this data are collected through traditional face to face household surveys Due to the remote and dispersed nature of many populations in developing countries but also because of the complex nature of many survey questionnaires collection of timely welfare data has often proved expensive and logistically challenging Yet there is a need for faster cheaper to collect lighter more nimble data collection methods to address data gaps between big household surveys The recent proliferation of mobile phone networks has opened new possibilities By combining baseline data from a traditional household survey with subsequent interviews of selected respondents using mobile phones this facilitates welfare monitoring and opinion polling almost real time The purpose of this handbook is to contribute to the development of the new field of mobile phone data collection in developing countries The handbook documents how this innovative approach to data collection works its advantages and challenges The handbook draws primarily from the authors first hand experiences with mobile phone surveys in Africa and also benefits from experiences elsewhere It is intended to serve a diverse audience including those involved in collecting representative data using mobile phones and those using data collected through this approach For those who will be implementing a mobile phone panel survey the different chapters guide them through every stage of the implementation process For potential users of the data collected via mobile phone technology the handbook presents a new approach to data collection which they can use for monitoring programs and facilitate almost real time decision making A further purpose of this book is to contribute to the debate regarding the advantages of the method as well as the challenges associated with it

Measuring African Development Morten Jerven, 2016-04-14 The chief economist for the World Bank s Africa region Shanta Devarajan delivered a devastating assessment of the capacity of African states to measure development in his 2013 article Africa s Statistical Tragedy Is there a statistical tragedy unfolding in Africa now If so then examining the roots of the problem of provision of statistics in poor economies is certainly of great importance This book on measuring African development in the past and in the present draws on the historical experience of colonial French West Africa Ghana Sudan Mauritania and Tanzania and the more contemporary experiences of Ethiopia and the Democratic Republic of Congo The authors each reflect on the changing ways statistics represent African economies and how they are used to govern them This book was published as a special issue of the Canadian Journal of Development Studies Impact Evaluation in Practice, Second Edition Paul J.

Gertler, Sebastian Martinez, Patrick Premand, Laura B. Rawlings, Christel M. J. Vermeersch, 2011-06-13 This book offers an accessible introduction to the topic of impact evaluation and its practice in development While the book is geared principally towards development practitioners and policymakers designing prospective impact evaluations we trust that it will be a valuable resource for students and others interested in using impact evaluation Prospective impact evaluations should be used selectively to assess whether or not a program has achieved its intended results or to test alternatives for achieving those results We consider that more and better impact evaluation will help strengthen the evidence base for development policies and programs around the world If governments and development practitioners can make policy decisions based on evidence including evidence generated through impact evaluation our hope is that development resources will be spent more effectively and ultimately have a greater impact on reducing poverty and improving people s lives The three chapters in this handbook provide a non technical introduction to impact evaluations including Why Evaluate in Chapter 1 How to Evaluate in Chapter 2 and How to Implement Impact Evaluations in Chapter 3 These elements are the basic tools needed in order to successfully carry out an impact evaluation From a methodological standpoint our approach to impact evaluation is largely pragmatic we think that the most appropriate methods should be identified to fit the operational context and not the other way around This is best achieved at the outset of the program through the design of prospective impact evaluation that can be built into the project s implementation We argue that gaining consensus between key stakeholders and identifying an evaluation design that fits the political and operational context is as important as the method itself We also believe strongly that impact evaluations should be upfront about their limitations and caveats Finally we strongly encourage policymakers and program managers to consider impact evaluations in a logical framework that clearly sets out the causal pathways by which the program works to produce outputs and influence final outcomes and to combine impact evaluations with monitoring and selected complementary evaluation approach to gain a full picture of performance This book builds on a core set of teaching materials developed for the Turning Promises to Evidence workshops organized by the office of the Chief Economist for Human Development HDNCE in partnership with regional units and the Development Economics Research Group DECRG at the World Bank
