

Reform in China

Challenges and Choices

A Summary and Analysis of the Chinese Economic System Reform Research Institute Survey

Edited by Bruce L. Reynolds, Union College

This work presents the fruits of what is arguably the most extraordinary empirical investigation undertaken in twentieth-century China. In October 1984, in the wake of stunning reforms in the agricultural sector, the Party issued a clarion call to push reform into China's cities and the industrial sector. Thus by 1985 the question was: how is reform faring, and what is to do next? Foreign exchange imbalances, inflation, and many other problems had come to the fore and were crying out for explanation and solution.

In this context the State Council Economic Reform Research Institute, under the direct patronage of Premier Zhao Ziyang, launched a research project to get to the bottom of these issues through a series of six field investigations. The reports that emanated from these investigations, which are recorded in this book, represent the findings of these investigations. The young investigators, many of them are a rising defense of urban reform. The young investigators, many of them are students, marshaled millions of facts and put them to work. In the process they offer us an array of fascinating insights into how Chinese society functions, from the motivations of factory managers to the more familiar question of whether wheat should work outside the home.

Prospects for Socialism in China's Countryside

Examining the impact of controversial post-Mao rural economic reforms—which greatly expanded the role of money, markets, and commodity exchange—in production relations, this book discusses the evolution of responsibility systems, focusing on the demands of peasant initiatives and leaders' responses to uncover the nature of communication in policy formation. The themes discussed in the development of this study include the evolution and role of specialized households; the impact of new economic associations on preexisting cooperative institutions and relations; the impact of the reforms on the development of rural industries; and the consequences over the roles of village leaders, growing income inequality, grain production, planning, uneven development, state versus collective versus private accumulation, and the essential nature of contract relations.

Based on intensive scholarly research and interviews with peasants, herdsmen, rural factory workers, and university students from the countryside and village, commune, and county leaders in Yunnan, Sichuan, Fujian, Shanghai, and Inner Mongolia, this study questions a common assumption that there is an inherent incompatibility between commodity relations and communal or cooperative values and relations. It seeks to uncover how the reforms may improve the prospects for development of autonomous self-managing producers' collectives, but also tries to expose their real limitations.

responses of countries reflected their own specific circumstances With chapters from leading scholars such as David Painter and Dane Kennedy this book shows how the origins course and consequences of the oil crises of the 1970s are crucial to understanding the transformation of the international order in the late twentieth century Chinese Economic Statecraft from 1978 to 1989 Priscilla Roberts, 2022-05-10 This volume focuses on Chinese economic statecraft during the first decade of Deng Xiaoping's reform and opening up policies from 1978 to 1989 During these years Chinese economic engagement with the external world was tentative and experimental with long term strategies still decidedly under development Prominent topics covered are China's efforts to steer an economic course tailored to and representing what Deng Xiaoping famously described as socialism with Chinese characteristics China's quest for advanced science and technology China's dealings with international economic institutions especially the World Bank China's engagement with other powers including Japan the United States the ASEAN nations and Europe and the role of non governmental organizations including foreign policy think tanks exchange groups and educational institutions in developing Chinese economic thinking and methodology during this decade Contributors also focus on how elements of the Chinese military turned to building China's new economic infrastructure and on Chinese efforts to break into foreign markets The volume ends with an overview and reassessment of earlier findings on Chinese economic statecraft in these years by one of the leading Chinese experts on the PRC's international policy Globalisation, Transition and Development in China Rui Huaichuan, 2004-06-02 Based on extensive original research Globalisation Transition and Development in China explains China's development strategy and its underlying forces and the success of this strategy It examines China's gradualist approach which emphasizes development first and regards transition and globalization as secondary enacting liberalization of domestic markets and integration into the world economy in a paced way avoiding dramatic changes which might impede or even reverse development and argues that this approach is broadly correct It considers China's failures including the failure to build large globally competitive corporations despite the intention to do this and shows how China's economic strategy has been implemented in detail with a case study of the large and important coal industry The Rise of Asia Frank B. Tipton, 1998-05-01 For many years Japan was seen as the peculiar exception in Asia a highly dynamic economy isolated in an otherwise moribund continent With the rise of the Southeast Asian and Chinese economies however it has now become clear that Asia as a whole is experiencing an extraordinary revolution which will result within a very few years in living standards for some countries being on a par with those in the West The results of this transformation can only be guessed at but The Rise of Asia adds a far greater sophistication to our understanding of how this process came about treating the key areas of Asian life economics society and politics as an integrated whole and avoiding the trap of most commentators who see the phenomenon as an exclusively postwar economic issue Balancing the uniquely Asian aspects with global developmental factors Dr Tipton creates a convincing picture of how this amazing change has occurred Global Environmental Change National Research
