Psychophysics Beyond Sensation Christian Kaernbach, Erich Schröger, Hermann Müller, Hermann Müller, Erich Schröger, 2004-05-20 This volume presents a series of studies that expand laws invariants and principles of psychophysics beyond its classical domain of sensation This book's goal is to demonstrate the extent of the domain of psychophysics ranging from sensory processes through sensory memory and short term memory issues to the interaction between sensation and action The dynamics and timing of human performance are a further important issue within this extended framework of psychophysics Given the similarity of the various cortical areas in terms of their neuroanatomical structure it is an important question whether this similarity is paralleled by a similarity of processes These issues are addressed by the contributions in the present volume using state of the art research methods in behavioral research psychophysiology and mathematical modeling The book is divided into four sections Part I presents contributions concerning the classical domain of psychophysical judgment The next two parts are concerned with elementary and higher order processes and the concluding section deals with psychophysical models The sections are introduced by guest editorials contributed by independent authors These editorials present the authors personal view on the respective section providing an integrated account of the various contributions or highlighting their focus of interest among them While also voicing their own and sometimes different point of view they contribute to the process of discussion that makes science so exciting This volume should be of great interest to advanced students in neuroscience cognitive science psychology neuropsychology and related areas who seek to evaluate the range and power of psychological work today Established scientists in those fields will also appreciate the variety of issues addressed within the same methodological framework and their multiple interconnections and stimulating cross talk

The Perception and Cognition of Visual Space Paul Linton, 2017-08-28 This book explores a central question in the study of depth perception does the visual system rely upon objective knowledge and subjective meaning to specify visual depth Linton advances an alternative interpretation to the generally accepted affirmative answer according to which many of the apparent contributions of knowledge and meaning to depth perception are better understood as contributions to our post perceptual cognition of depth In order to defend this position a new account of visual cognition is required as well as a better understanding of the optical and physiological cues to depth This book will appeal to students and researchers in psychology vision science and philosophy as well as technologists and content creators working in virtual and augmented reality

Computational, Geometric, and Process Perspectives on Facial Cognition Michael J. Wenger, James T. Townsend, 2005-04-11 Within the last three decades interest in the psychological experience of human faces has drawn together cognitive science researchers from diverse backgrounds Computer scientists talk to neural scientists who draw on the work of mathematicians who explicitly influence those conducting behavioral experiments The chapters in this volume illustrate the breadth of the research on facial perception and memory with the emphasis being on mathematical and computational approaches In pulling together these chapters the editors sought to do much more than illustrate breadth They endeavored as well to illustrate the synergies and tensions that inevitably result from adopting a broad view one consistent with the emerging discipline of cognitive science

The Reality of Illusion Joseph Anderson, 1996 Applying research findings from studies in visual perception neurophysiology cognitive psychology developmental psychology and anthropology Joseph D Anderson defines the complex interaction of motion pictures with the human mind and organizes the relationship between film and cognitive science Anderson s primary argument is that motion picture viewers mentally process the projected images and sounds of a movie according to the same perceptual rules used in response to visual and aural stimuli in the world outside the theater To process everyday events in the world the human mind is equipped with capacities developed through millions of years of evolution In this context Anderson builds a metatheory influenced by the writings of J J and Eleanor Gibson and employs it to explore motion picture comprehension as a subset of general human comprehension and perception focusing his ecological approach to film on the analysis of cinema s true substance illusion Anderson investigates how viewers with their mental capacities designed for survival respond to particular aspects of filmic structure continuity diegesis character development and narrative and examines the ways in which rules of visual and aural processing are recognized and exploited by filmmakers He uses Orson Welles s Citizen Kane to disassemble and redefine the contemporary concept of character identification he addresses continuity in a shot by shot analysis of images from Casablanca and he uses a wide range of research studies such as Harry F Harlow s work with infant rhesus monkeys to describe how motion pictures become a substitute or surrogate reality for an audience By examining the human capacity for play and the inherent potential for illusion Anderson considers the reasons viewers find movies so enthralling so
