One Hundred Semesters William M. Chace, 2014 In One Hundred Semesters William Chace mixes incisive analysis with memoir to create an illuminating picture of the evolution of American higher education over the past half century Chace follows his own journey from undergraduate education at Haverford College to teaching at Stillman a traditionally African American college in Alabama in the 1960s to his days as a professor at Stanford and his appointment as president of two very different institutions Wesleyan University and Emory University Chace takes us with him through his decades in education his expulsion from college his boredom and confusion as a graduate student during the Free Speech movement at Berkeley and his involvement in three contentious cases at Stanford on tenure curriculum and academic freedom When readers follow Chace on his trip to jail after he joins Stillman students in a civil rights protest it is clear that the ideas he presents are born of experience not preached from an ivory tower The book brings the reader into both the classroom and the administrative office portraying the unique importance of the former and the peculiar rituals rewards and difficulties of the latter Although Chace sees much to lament about American higher education spiraling costs increased consumerism overly aggressive institutional self promotion and marketing the corruption of intercollegiate sports and the melancholy state of the humanities he finds more to praise He points in particular to its strength and vitality suggesting that this can be sustained if higher education remains true to its purpose providing a humane and necessary education inside the classroom and out for America's future generations Making a Man Gwen Hyman, 2009 Gruel and truffles wine and gin opium and cocaine Making a Man addresses consumption of food drink and drugs in the conspicuously consuming nineteenth century in order to explore the question of what in fact makes a man in novels of the period
