J. PEYTON, 1773     Introduction to the Theory of Laser-Atom Interactions Marvin H. Mittleman, 2013-03-09 This book grew out of a graduate course given in the Physics Department of the City College of New York for the first time during the 1976-1977 academic year and a series of lectures given at the Catholic University of Louvain at Louvain-la-Neuve, Belgium during the Spring and Summer of 1977. I am indebted to Professor F. Brouillard and the DYMO group at that institution for the stimulation and hospitality provided during that period. In both cases the lectures were at a level that assumed only a knowledge of elementary quantum mechanics of a typical first year graduate course. I have tried to continue that level of discussion in this book and to make it self-contained for any discussions that go beyond that level. In some sections of the book the problems dealt with are too complicated to provide the entire description here. In that case references to the original work are given.     Youth Studies and Generations Vitor Sérgio Ferreira, 2020-03-25 There is currently much discourse about generations in the public sphere. A sequence of letters conflates generations and age cohorts born in the last few decades: generation X, Y or Z, as well as multiple categories are used to describe today's young people as a generation that is distinct from its predecessors. Despite the popularity of generational labels in media, politics or even academia, the use of generation as a conceptual tool in youth studies has been controversial. This Special Issue allows readers to better understand the key issues regarding the use of generation as a theoretical concept and/or as a social category in the field of youth studies, shedding light on the controversies, trends and cautions that go through it.
