Interaction and Grammar Elinor Ochs, Emanuel A. Schegloff, Sandra A. Thompson, 1996-12-12 Many scholars of language have accepted a view of grammar as a clearly delineated and internally coherent structure that is best understood as a self contained system The contributors to this volume propose a very different way of approaching and understanding grammar taking as their starting point the position that the very integrity of grammar is bound up with its place in the larger schemes of the organization of human conduct particularly social interaction their essays explore a rich variety of linkages between interaction and grammar

Grammar in Interaction Cecilia E. Ford, 1997
Grammar in Interaction Cecilia E. Ford, 1993-04-08 Cecilia E Ford explores the question what work do adverbial clauses do in conversational interaction Her analysis of this predominating conjunction strategy in English conversation is based on the assumption that grammars reflect recurrent patterns of situated language use and that a primary site for language is in spontaneous talk She considers the interactional as well as the informational work of talk and shows how conversationalists use grammar to coordinate their joint language production The management of the complexities of the sequential development of a conversation and the social roles of conversational participants have been extensively examined within the sociological approach of Conversation Analysis Dr Ford uses Conversation Analysis as a framework for the interpretation of interclausal relations in her database of American English conversations Her book contributes to a growing body of research on grammar in discourse which has until recently remained largely focused on monologic rather than dialogic functions of language
The Grammar of Interactional Language Martina Wiltschko, 2021-06-17 A cutting edge work this book analyses the grammar of interactional language with a focus on discourse markers and their typology linguistic research appears to be crystallizing around systematic themes which are all represented in this collection of papers. In the first section where the relation between language and interaction is viewed from the perspective of language structure several articles deal with the potential of a single structure for both turn and sequence construction revealing a play off between planned and occasioned syntax with potentially far reaching consequences for language development. Other articles deal with lexical expressions as resources for the conduct of interaction showing how they are heavily dependent on turn position and sequential context for their meaning potential. In the second section with a view from the perspective of the interactional order a systematic focus of interest lies on three different conversational tasks projecting turn and turn unit completion starting up turns with non beginnings and self repairing. The cross linguistic studies here all agree that common interactional tasks may well be carried out by quite different linguistic practices and that these practices are dependent to a certain extent on language features which are typologically distinct.

Compliments and Compliment Responses Andrea Golato, 2005. This book analyzes compliments and compliment responses in naturally occurring talk in interaction in German. Using Conversation Analytic methodology it views complimenting and responding to compliments as social actions which are co produced and negotiated among interactants. This study is the first to analyze the entire complimenting sequence within the larger interactional context thereby demonstrating the interconnectedness of sequence organization turn design and varying functions of a turn. In this regard the present study makes a novel contribution to the study of talk in interaction beyond German. The book adds to existing work on interaction and grammar by closely analyzing the functions of linguistic resources used to design compliment turns and compliment responses. Here the study extends previous Conversation Analytic work on person reference by including an analysis of inanimate object reference. Lastly the book discusses the use and function of various particles and demonstrates how speaker alignments and misalignments are accomplished through various grammatical forms.

cognitive social and cultural perspective on language and communication The Grammar of Interaction Susana Rodríguez Rosique, Jordi M. Antolí Martínez, 2025-12-15 This volume deals with the relations between grammar and interaction from different perspectives with the aim of unraveling the way in which a language through the different forms of discourse from which it emerges reflects certain social and community based schemas that is how language originates within the space shared by the speaker and the addressees The first part Grammar and Interaction concerns how interaction may intervene in grammar the second part The Grammar of Interaction approaches both notions and linguistic structures which are anchored in interaction while revolving around epistemicity evidentiality and modality The third part Interaction as a Model for Discourse concerns how certain constructions emerge from interaction and are further used to model discourse Finally the fourth and last part of the book Interaction as a Driver for Change focuses on how interaction may help to delimit linguistic categories

Nonsentential Constituents Ellen L. Barton, 1990-01-01 Linguists traditionally have assumed that full sentence sources truncated by ellipsis rules account for the grammatical structure as well as the semantic interpretation of fragments like B below A What happened in 1974 B A scandal in the White House A sentential structure dominated by the initial node of S is reduced to a fragment by the operation of ellipsis and it is the full sentential source that provides the semantic interpretation for the remaining fragment Barton argues against both of these assumptions She claims that independent major lexical categories like the example above are generated within a grammar as syntactic structures dominated by the initial node of NP VP and so on rather than S Her second claim is that the major part of the interpretation of these independent constituent utterances takes place within a pragmatic context rather than in the semantic component of a grammar A theory of nonsentential constituents is presented consisting of two interacting models an autonomous competence model of the grammar of nonsentential constituent structures and a modular pragmatic model of the interpretation of independent constituent utterances in context

Negotiating Agreement and Disagreement in Japanese Junko Mori, 1999-10-15 On the basis of the meticulous transcription observation process of Conversation Analysis this book observes recurrent patterns in sequences where Japanese speakers negotiate agreement and disagreement It contributes to the growing body of research on interaction and grammar by examining how linguistic resources are utilized for constructing turns and anticipating the upcoming course of interaction More specifically it focuses on the recurrent use of two structurally different types of connective expressions clause initial connectives and clause final connective particles The study examines the occurrences of these causal and contrastive markers with reference to their sequential environment and the resulting interaction While the introductory chapters situate this approach in the current literature the main analytical chapters investigate the ways in which delivery of agreement delivery of disagreement and pursuit for agreement are performed with the use of the different types of connective expressions As one of the earliest conversation analytic studies of Japanese this book also addresses methodological issues concerning cross linguistic cross cultural studies of human
