Structural Life Assessment Methods A. F. Liu, 1998-07-01 Advanced Life Analysis Methods: Crack growth analysis methods for attachment lugs Thomas Richard Brussat, 1984 Fatigue Damage, Crack Growth and Life Prediction F. Ellyin, 1996-11-30

Fatigue failure is a multi stage process It begins with the initiation of cracks and with continued cyclic loading the cracks propagate finally leading to the rupture of a component or specimen The demarcation between the above stages is not well defined Depending upon the scale of interest the variation may span three orders of magnitude For example to a material scientist an initiated crack may be of the order of a micron whereas for an engineer it can be of the order of a millimetre It is not surprising therefore to see that investigation of the fatigue process has followed different paths depending upon the scale of phenomenon under investigation Interest in the study of fatigue failure increased with the advent of industrial ization Because of the urgent need to design against fatigue failure early investigators focused on prototype testing and proposed failure criteria similar to design formulae Thus a methodology developed whereby the fatigue theories were proposed based on experimental observations albeit at times with limited scope This type of phenomenological approach progressed rapidly during the past four decades as closed loop testing machines became available Assessment of Damage Tolerance Requirements and Analyses: Analytical methods ,1986 Towards a Unified Fatigue Life Prediction Method for Marine Structures Weicheng Cui, Xiaoping Huang, Fang Wang, 2014-11-04

In order to apply the damage tolerance design philosophy to design marine structures accurate prediction of fatigue crack growth under service conditions is required Now more and more people have realized that only a fatigue life prediction method based on fatigue crack propagation FCP theory has the potential to explain various fatigue phenomena observed In this book the issues leading towards the development of a unified fatigue life prediction UFLP method based on FCP theory are addressed Based on the philosophy of the UFLP method the current inconsistency between fatigue design and inspection of marine structures could be resolved This book presents the state of the art and recent advances including those by the authors in fatigue studies It is designed to lead the future directions and to provide a useful tool in many practical applications It is intended to address to engineers naval architects research staff professionals and graduates engaged in fatigue prevention design and survey of marine structures in fatigue studies of materials and structures in experimental laboratory research in planning the repair and maintenance of existing structures and in rule development The book is also an effective educational aid in naval architecture marine civil and mechanical engineering Prof Weicheng Cui is the Dean of Hadal Science and Technology Research Center of Shanghai Ocean University China Dr Xiaoping Huang is an associate professor of School of Naval Architecture Ocean and Civil Engineering of Shanghai Jiao Tong University China Dr Fang Wang is an associate professor of Hadal Science and Technology Research Center of Shanghai Ocean University China Advanced Life Analysis Methods Thomas Richard Brussat, K. Kathiresan, 1984

Analysis procedures for the assessment of the damage tolerance of aircraft

attachment lugs are developed and presented Stress and fracture analyses are conducted for simple male straight shank lugs subjected to symmetric loading and tapered lugs subjected to symmetric and off axis loadings Solutions of stress distributions and stress intensity factors are obtained for various parameters The parametric variations include lug outer to inner radius ratios corner and through the thickness cracks crack lengths and aspect ratios with and without interference fit bushing and loads above and below yield of the lugs Methods of varying degree of sophistication are considered in the development of stress intensity factor solutions for cracks in attachment lugs For through the thickness crack problems simple compounding method two dimensional cracked finite element method and the weight function method are used In the case of corner cracks solutions are obtained using simple compounding method weight function method and rigorous three dimensional hybrid displacement cracked finite element method The stress distributions and the stress intensity factors are consolidated into a crack growth analysis procedure including several crack growth models and spectrum retardation models to predict the fracture and crack growth behaviors in attachment lugs
