Graham Tipple,2000-01-01 Many countries have large stocks of government built housing which for various reasons are in poor physical conditions and or do not conform to the expectations of occupants The occupants of such housing frequently make unauthorized but quite considerable changes and extensions transformations to their dwellings This book examines user initiated transformations to government built housing in Bangladesh Egypt Ghana and Zimbabwe surveyed in a research program sponsored by the UK Department for International Development The 1600 dwellings surveyed show how relatively low income households are capable of supplying new rooms and services both to improve their own housing conditions and to supply rental rooms or accommodation for family members living rent free The new construction is often of at least as good quality as the original structures and sometime envelopes the original in a new skin It is clear that transformation adds accommodation and services to existing housing upgrades the housing stock and creates variety out of uniformity The study leads to policy suggestions to encourage transformations for the renewal of government housing These include the provision of loan finance the encouragement of co operation between neighbors especially in multi storey housing and the planned colonization of open space next to the dwellings where plots are not provided For new housing it is clear that designs for new areas are only the beginning of an on going development process rather than a blueprint for once for all development

Enabling Environments Edward Steinfeld,G. Scott Danford,2013-06-29 This volume is the first effort to compile representative work in the emerging research area on the relationship of disability and physical environment since Barrier Free Environments edited by Michael Bednar was published in 1977 Since that time disability rights legislation like the Americans with Disabilities Act in the United States the worldwide growth of the independent living movement rapid deinstitutionalization and the maturation of functional assessment methodology have all had their impact on this research area The impact has been most noticeable in two ways fostering the integration of environmental variables in rehabilitation research and practice and changing paradigms for environmental interventions As the contributions in this volume demonstrate the relationship of disability and physical environment is no longer of interest primarily to designers and other professionals concerned with managing the resources of the built environment The physical environment has always been recognized as an important variable affecting rehabilitation outcome Until recently however concepts and tools were not available to measure its impact in clinical practice and outcomes research In particular lack of a theoretical foundation that integrated environment with the disablement process hampered development of both research and clinical methodology Thus the physical environment received little attention from the mainstream rehabilitation research community However this situation is changing rapidly
