

Labor without class

A controversial exposé that lays bare the take-over of the workers' party by the 'Chardonnay Socialists'.

In a bid to woo the trendy urban middle class Labor has deserted the working class it was set up to defend. Like the old inner city suburbs, the ALP has been taken over by university educated professionals who have imposed a social agenda that is hostile to Australian blue collar culture.

An unashamed revisionist history, Labor Without Class looks at the record of Whitlam, Hayden, Hawke and Keating, through the prism of class – the ghost at the Labor banquet.

Carefully sifting the evidence, long-time Labor Party member Michael Thompson overturns political orthodoxy about social movements, economic rationalism, Keating's 1996 defeat, the 'women's vote', and the 'classless' future painted by Labor's younger visionaries.

The interests of urban middle class and working people (including women and migrants) remain irreconcilable. Labor must recognise the persistence of class in Australian society and take sides, or risk becoming the party of a new elite.

'... draws attention to the too often self-serving agendas of special interest groups, who are skilled at cloaking their self-interest in the language of compassion, and whose moral outrage is often levelled at fundamental working class values.'

Martin Ferguson, Federal Shadow Minister for Employment, Training and Population

'... a true believers' book. It vigorously refutes many self-serving interpretations of recent political history.'

Peter Walsh, former ALP Senator and Finance Minister

'... a powerful and persuasive polemic which should help the Labor Party return to its roots, the defence of common people.'

P.P. McGuinness

Michael Thompson hails from the old working class community of pre-gentrified Balmain. He has degrees in economics and law and has worked as a senior adviser to former Minister for Industrial Relations Senator Peter Cook.

The material is arranged thematically, highlighting the variety of interests that coexist and conflict within the city. Issues such as gender, class, race, age and disability are covered along with urban experiences such as walking, politics, anthropology, cultural history, cultural geography, art, critical theory, visual culture, literary studies, social policy and cultural studies.
