Participatory Research in Conservation and Rural Livelihoods Louise Fortmann, 2009-03-12 Participatory Research in Conservation and Rural Livelihoods Doing Science Together starts from the understanding that all people create knowledge and that the creation of sustainable livelihoods and of conditions that protect and sustain rural ecosystems are interrelated. Here local experts and professional researchers write independently about the participatory research processes through which they created new knowledge together. They demonstrate that interdependent science can produce more accurate and locally appropriate data while frankly addressing persisting issues such as unequal power, whose knowledge and what ways of knowing count, whose voice can be heard or appear in print, and other dilemmas of this practice. Conservation scientists and practitioners will both benefit from reading this book. First book to examine community participatory research techniques that focuses on conservation aims. Unique book in that it is written from the perspective of participating community volunteers and researching scientists. Part of the prestigious Conservation Science and Practices series published in association with the Zoological Society of London. Participatory Research in Conservation and Rural Livelihoods is brilliant, passionate and inspiring. Richa Nagar, University of Minnesota, co-author of Playing with Fire. Innovative Communities Jerry Velasquez, 2005. This book introduces the concept of community innovation and illustrates its role and impact in promoting sustainability. It includes nine case studies from the Asia Pacific region where communities are adopting innovative methods to address complex and unpredictable environmental problems and promote sustainable development. This often requires new cultures, institutions and governance structures as well as dramatic changes in people's perceptions, attitudes, roles and behaviours. The authors examine environmental initiatives within the region including natural resource management, eco-tourism, forest management, solid waste management and water management. The book offers a rich balance of perspectives from experts in community development, urban planning and local environmental management as well as community leaders, local government officials, journalists, non-governmental organization representatives and academics. It provides theoretical and practical insights for communities and those who provide support to communities at the local, regional and global levels of governance.

Recovering the Commons Herbert Reid, Betsy Taylor, 2010-02-05. This penetrating work culls key concepts from grassroots activism to hold critical social theory accountable to the needs, ideas and organizational practices of the global justice movement. The resulting critique of neoliberalism hinges on place-based struggles of groups marginalized by globalization and represents a brave rethinking of politics, economy, culture and professionalism. Providing new practical and conceptual tools for responding to human and environmental crises in Appalachia and beyond, Recovering the Commons radically revises the framework of critical social thought regarding our stewardship of the civic and ecological commons. Herbert Reid and Betsy Taylor ally social theory, field sciences and local knowledge in search of healthy connections among body, place and commons that form a basis for solidarity as well as a vital infrastructure for a reliable, durable world. Drawing particularly on the work of philosophers Maurice Merleau-Ponty, John Dewey and Hannah Arendt, the authors reconfigure social theory by ridding it of the aspects that reduce place and community to sets of interchangeable components. Instead, they reconcile complementary pairs such as mind/body and society/nature in the reclamation of public space. With its analysis embedded in philosophical and material contexts this penetrating work culls key concepts from grassroots activism to hold critical social theory accountable to the needs ideas and organizational practices of the global justice movement The resulting critique of neoliberalism hinges on place based struggles of groups marginalized by globalization and represents a brave rethinking of politics economy culture and professionalism

Charity and Giving Nora Franklin, AI, 2025-01-31

Charity and Giving offers a comprehensive exploration of modern philanthropy s transformation from traditional charitable giving to strategic social investment The book navigates the complex intersection of philanthropic initiatives with contemporary social challenges drawing insights from two centuries of giving history and data from over 1 000 non profit organizations Through a blend of historical analysis and modern case studies it demonstrates how philanthropy has evolved from the simplistic donation models of the Industrial Revolution to today s sophisticated impact driven approaches The book s unique strength lies in its systematic examination of three core areas digital age philanthropy transformation impact measurement methodologies and emerging sustainable social change models By analyzing both successful and failed initiatives it provides practical insights into how traditional charitable impulses can be combined with modern management principles to maximize social impact The work is particularly valuable for its extensive research base incorporating interviews with 200 industry leaders and examining giving patterns across different regions Moving from theoretical frameworks to practical applications the book progresses through carefully structured sections that examine the non profit ecosystem various funding models and innovative approaches to impact measurement It addresses crucial contemporary debates about private philanthropy s role in public welfare while providing actionable insights for foundation leaders non profit executives and policymakers The integration of digital tools and impact measurement techniques makes this an essential resource for understanding modern philanthropic strategies and their implementation in today s rapidly evolving social landscape

The Practice of International Development Jerrold Keilson, Michael Gubser, 2017-09-22 Development analysts tend to give short shrift to the seemingly minor bureaucratic hitches faced by practitioners those who design manage implement and evaluate aid projects Often critical of foreign aid either for its apparent ineffectiveness at alleviating poverty or its purported neocolonial implications the academic literature rarely acknowledges the experiences and pressures faced by practitioners themselves as they implement aid funded development projects the meetings paperwork negotiations site visits financial transactions logistical arrangements interviews program activities and beneficiary interactions that keep projects running And yet the impact of aid projects and indeed the impact of development itself often grows out of the daily activities and personal interactions of development practitioners This unique book considers challenges from the perspective of development practitioners who confront technical managerial political theoretical and moral quandaries on a daily basis With chapters written by expert practitioners on different aspects of design and management of international development activities this book examines real issues and navigates the often contradictory demands of local development needs including international donor imperatives limited financial resources time information and assurance of results the competing pulls of administrative efficiency and the desire to alleviate suffering It also gives readers access to the crucial but little heard voices of those who spend their professional lives designing and managing foreign aid projects offering insight into what did or did not work on projects they have managed implemented or evaluated These insights do not seek to identify universally right or wrong ways of doing development instead they highlight pros and cons associated with various approaches and decisions This book provides valuable insights for students and others interested in a development career encourages practitioners to engage in reflection and persuades researchers to further consider the influence of practice on project success or failure
