Hiring Fair:

Working the Land Nicola Verdon, 2017-09-22 This book offers a new history of the farmworker in England from 1850 to the present day It focuses on the paid worker considering how the experiences of farm work the work performed wages earned and conditions of hiring were shaped by gender age and region Combining data extracted from statistical sources with personal and autobiographical accounts it places the individual farmworker back into a broader collective history Beginning in the mid Victorian era when farmworkers were the most numerically significant occupational group in England it considers the impact of economic technological and social change on the scale and nature of farm work over the next hundred and fifty years whilst also highlighting the continuation of some practices including the use of casual and migrant workers to perform low paid seasonal work Written in a lively and accessible manner this book will appeal to those with an interest in rural history gender history and modern British history

Ulster Farming Families Jonathan Bell, 2005 Farming in the generation between 1930 and 1960 saw changes on a previously unknown scale On most holdings work continued to be carried out by all the family members Men women and children all had roles in the production of crops and livestock At busier times neighbours were called on for help and workers were also hired on some farms either full time or seasonally All of these relationships could lead to tensions and conflict but they also led to great intimacy and kindness with individuals showing commitment to the well being of their family their neighbours and even their employers and employees This book uses oral history to explore life on Ulster farms between 1930 and 1960 This valuable record of the farming community describes in fascinating detail the many changes in practically every aspect of working life and their associated patterns of social life all in the face of increasing government intervention globalisation of markets and the cataclysm of the Second World War These massive changes have often been seen as damaging social networks in rural areas but the collective memories of those involved bear witness to their marvellous capacity to adapt The oral testimonies on which the book is based show that for farming people change could and did create new relationships and wider opportunities on both a professional and personal level

The Golden Age Ian Inkster, Colin Griffin, Judith Rowbotham, 2017-07-05 In 1850 the Industrial Revolution came to an end In 1851 the Great Exhibition illustrated to the whole world the supremacy of industrial England For the next twenty years Britain reigned supreme From around 1870 Britain began to decline Britain is now a second rate power with strong memories of its former supremacy The above five sentences summarise a common view of the sequencing of Britain s rise and relative fall a stereotype that is challenged and modified in the essays of The Golden Age By concentrating on central aspects of social and industrial change authors expose the underpinnings of supremacy its unsung underside its tarnished gold Major themes cover industrial and technological change social institutions and gender relations in a period during which industry and industrialism were equally celebrated and nurtured Against this background it is difficult to argue for any sudden decline of energy assets or institution nor for any significant move from an industrial society to one in which a hearty manufacturing was replaced by commerce and land sensibility and artifice

A Lost Frontier Revealed Alan Fox,2009 A traveller through the length and breadth of England is soon aware of cultural differences some of which are clearly visible in the landscape The eminent English historian Charles Phythian Adams has put forth that England through much of the last millennium could be divided into regional societies which broadly coincided with groups of pre 1974 counties These shire assemblages in turn lay largely within the major river drainage systems of the country In this unusual study Alan Fox tests for and establishes the presence of an informal frontier between two of the proposed societies astride the Leicestershire Lincolnshire border which lies on the watershed between the Trent and Witham drainage basins The evidence presented suggests a strong case for a cultural frontier zone which is announced by a largely empty landscape astride the border between the contrasting settlement patterns of these neighbouring counties
