Excerpt from Anthropology An Introduction to the Study of Man and Civilization In times when subjects of education have multiplied it may seem at first sight a hardship to lay on the already heavily pressed student a new science But it will be found that the real effect of Anthropology is rather to lighten than increase the strain of learning In the mountains we see the bearers of heavy burdens contentedly shoulder a carrying frame besides because they find its weight more than compensated by the convenience of holding together and balancing their load So it is with the science of Man and Civilization which connects into a more manageable whole the scattered subjects of an ordinary education Much of the difficulty of learning and teaching lies in the scholar s not seeing clearly what each science or art is for what its place is among the purposes of life If he knows something of its early history and how it arose from the simpler wants and circumstances of mankind he finds himself better able to lay hold of it than when as too often happens he is called on to take up an abstruse subject not at the beginning but in the middle About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
