Breitowitz, 1993-07-20 Breitowitz focuses on what many regard as the cutting issue of Jewish law as it grapples with the disintegrative forces of twentieth century life the problem of the Agunah or stranded wife In addition the Agunah issue raises intriguing questions about the impotence of religious law in a secular society and how the establishment and free exercise clauses intersect to facilitate or hinder the accommodation of religious interests All legal avenues available to secure relief are discussed including the use of prenuptial agreements the application of tort theory and the rather exotic approach of the New York Get law as well as the constitutional and common law impediments to the implementation of these remedies The text also includes comparative law material to illustrate how other legal systems particularly the state of Israel have handled this problem As the most comprehensive book on the subject it is invaluable to students of Jewish and family law and to practitioners of family law The American Jewish Year Book 1992 The American Jewish Committee, 1992-09 The Library owns the volumes of the American Jewish Yearbook from 1899 current
