The Making and Breaking of Classification Models in Linguistics Jane Klavan, 2024-06-04 The book provides a methodological blueprint for the study of constructional alternations using corpus linguistic methods in combination with different types of experimental data The book looks at a case study from Estonian This morphologically rich language is typologically different from Indo European languages such as English Corpus based studies allow us to detect patterns in the data and determine what is typical in the language Experiments are needed to determine the upper and lower limits of human classification behaviour They give us an idea of what is possible in a language and show how human classification behaviour is susceptible to more variation than corpus based models lead us to believe Corpora and forced choice data tell us that when we produce language we prefer one construction Acceptability judgement data tell us that when we comprehend language we judge both constructions as acceptable The book makes a theoretical contribution to the what why and how of constructional alternations

A Phi-Syntax for Nominal Concord Marco Benincasa, 2018-03-26 The book focusses on the grammatical feature definiteness in German visible in the inflection of adjectives ein sch n es Kind vs das sch n e Kind It argues for an analysis of this effect that draws a connection to the visible categories of number and gender on nouns and related words rather than an abstract property This conclusion rests on the conflation of the established grammatical categories into a single one number gender which explains a vast body of grammatical phenomena in German and principles of language in general
