DAILY LIFE

FAST FACTS

- A typical house was built around a central courtyard. Doors to each room off the house faced the courtyard.
- When families ate together, the women and children sat on stools. Men reclined on couches to eat.
- Men spent a lot of time away from home. However, they did do all the grocery shopping, since women were rarely seen in public.
- Women were expected to stay home and manage the finances, food, housework, and take care of the children. Richer women had servants to help them.
- Both men and women wore hats to protect themselves from the sun. Making a woman was not considered attractive.
- Children played with yo-yos, spinning tops, and hoops. Boys were given rattles and dolls.
- Favorite pets included birds, horses, and mice. Every family had a pet goat that gave them milk and cheese.

THE GAME OF KNUCKLEBONES

The ancient Greeks liked to play all sorts of games. They enjoyed great athletic competitions, but they also played board games. There is evidence that the Greeks played a kind of chess and checkers, using 36 squares instead of 64.

Children and women especially liked to play Knucklebones. Pieces for the game were the astragals.
