

The background of the entire image is a dramatic, fiery scene. A city, likely Rome, is shown in silhouette against a massive, intense fire that consumes the sky and reflects in the water in the foreground. A large eagle is depicted in flight, its wings spread wide, positioned in the upper right quadrant of the image. The overall color palette is dominated by deep reds, oranges, and yellows, creating a sense of urgency and destruction.

Richard Junger,2010-12-03 Becoming the Second City examines the development of Chicago's press and analyzes coverage of key events in its history to call attention to the media's impact in shaping the city's cultural and historical landscape. In concise extensively documented prose Richard Junger illustrates how nineteenth century newspapers acted as accelerants that boosted Chicago's growth in its early history by continually making and remaking the city's image for the public. Junger argues that the press was directly involved in Chicago's race to become the nation's most populous city a feat it briefly accomplished during the mid 1890s before the incorporation of Greater New York City irrevocably recast Chicago as the Second City. The book is populated with a colorful cast of influential figures in the history of Chicago and in the development of journalism. Junger draws on newspapers personal papers and other primary sources to piece together a lively portrait of the evolving character of Chicago in the nineteenth century. Highlighting the newspaper industry's involvement in the business and social life of Chicago Junger casts newspaper editors and reporters as critical intermediaries between the elite and the larger public and revisits key events and issues including the Haymarket Square bombing the 1871 fire the Pullman Strike and the World's Columbian Exposition in 1893 Safety Engineering ,1944 Technical Information Indexes ,1975

St Bride's foundation date is earlier than indicated by surviving documentary records and highlights the complexity of its subsequent development. Moreover it demonstrates how archaeology can significantly extend the history of such a relatively well documented building. Professor Grimes died before completing his definitive report this report is as an attempt to make good that omission. It is an assessment of the surviving field records and a re evaluation of 1950s finds together with an account of building recording at St Bride's in 1992. 3 conducted by a team from University College London. These excavations prove to be of more than local significance to medieval archaeologists. It was on the site of St Bride's that the concept of a parish church's research excavation was first evolved after the rubble from dozens of churches bombed during the Second World War were usually carted away with little or no thought for archaeological recording. Among many problems faced were the logistics of opening up a large internal area and exposing large groups of burials. Evidence was found not only at foundation level in the ground but also in the standing fabric of the medieval building elements of which survive in the present standing building. Detailed study of the finds recovered in 1952⁴ also proved rewarding and reports on the pottery, moulded stones, tiles, grave covers, glass and coins are included.
