Sixties British Cinema Robert Murphy, 2019-07-25 British films of the 1960s are undervalued Their search for realism has often been dismissed as drabness and their more frivolous efforts can now appear just empty headed Robert Murphy's Sixties British Cinema is the first study to challenge this view He shows that the realist tradition of the late 50s and early 60s was anything but dreary and depressing and gave birth to a clutch of films remarkable for their confidence and vitality Saturday Night and Sunday Morning A Kind of Loving and A Taste of Honey are only the better known titles Sixties British Cinema revalues key genres of the period horror crime and comedy and takes a fresh look at the swinging London films finding disturbing undertones that reflect the cultural changes of the decade Now that our cinematic past is constantly recycled on television Murphy's informative engaging and perceptive review of these films and their cultural and industrial context offers an invaluable guide to this neglected era of British cinema London's New Scene Lisa Tickner, 2020-07-07 A

Japan Ignacio A. Adriasola Muñoz, 2022-11-28 This groundbreaking book examines how the notion of the object was transformed in Japanese experimental art during a time of rapid social economic and environmental change Reviving the legacies of the historical avant garde Japanese artists and intellectuals of the 1960s formulated an aesthetics of disaffection through which they sought to address the stalemate of political and aesthetic representation Ignacio A Adriasola Muñoz draws from psychoanalytic theories of melancholia to examine the implications of such an approach tracing a genealogy of disaffection within modernist discourse By examining the discursive practices of artists working across a wide range of media and through a close analysis of artwork philosophical debates artist theories and critical accounts Adriasola Muñoz shows how negativity became an efficacious means of addressing politics as a source for the creative act of undoing In examining ideas of the object advanced by artists and intellectuals both in writing and as part of their artwork this book brings

Secularization in the Long 1960s Clive D. Field, 2017-03-09 Secularization in the Long 1960s Numerating Religion in Britain provides a major empirical contribution to the literature of secularization It moves beyond the now largely sterile and theoretical debates about the validity of the secularization thesis or paradigm Combining historical and social scientific perspectives Clive D Field uses a wide range of quantitative sources to probe the extent and pace of religious change in Britain during the long 1960s In most cases data is presented for the years 1955 80 with particular attention to the methodological and other challenges posed by each source type Following an introductory chapter which reviews the historiography introduces the sources and defines the chronological and other parameters Field provides evidence for all major facets of religious belonging behaving and believing as well as for institutional church measures The work engages with and largely refutes Callum G Brown s influential assertion that Britain experienced revolutionary secularization in the 1960s which was highly gendered in nature and with 1963 the major tipping point Instead a more nuanced picture emerges with some religious indicators in crisis others continuing on an existing downward trajectory and yet others remaining stable Building on previous research by the author and other scholars and rejecting recent proponents of counter secularization the long 1960s are ultimately located within the context of a longstanding gradualist and still ongoing process of secularization in Britain

London Transport Buses in the 1960s Jim Blake,2022-10-21 Just as life in Britain generally changed dramatically during the 1960s so did London Transport's buses and their operations Most striking was the abandonment of London's trolleybuses once the world's biggest system and their replacement by motorbuses Begun in 1959 using surplus RT types it was completed by May 1962 using new Routemasters designed specifically to replace them They then continued to replace RT types too Traffic congestion and staff shortages played havoc with London Transport's buses and Green Line coaches during the 1960s one man operation was seen as a remedy for the latter shortening routes in the Central Area for the former Thus the ill fated Reshaping Plan was born introducing new O M O bus types These entered trial service in 1965 and after much delay the plan was implemented from September 1968 onwards Sadly new MB types also introduced in the Country Area soon proved a disaster Unfortunately owing to a government diktat Routemaster production ended at the start of 1968 forcing LT to buy off the peg vehicles unsuited to London operation and their in house overhaul procedures The decade ended with the loss of LT's Country Area buses and Green Line coaches to the National Bus Company Photographer Jim Blake began photographing London's buses towards the end of the trolleybus conversion program in 1961 and continued dealing with the changing scene throughout the decade He dealt very thoroughly with the Reshaping changes and many of the photographs featured herein show rare and unusual scenes which have never been published before
