The Anatomy of the Village Thomas Sharp, 2013-07-24 Thomas Sharp was a key figure in mid C20 British planning whose renown stems from two periods in his career First he came to attention as a polemical writer in the 1930s on planning issues including as a virulent opponent of garden cities His prose tempered over time and this phase perhaps culminated in Town Planning first published in 1940 and reputed to have sold over 250 000 copies Subsequently the plans he produced for historic towns in the 1940s such as Oxford were very well known and were influential in developing ideas of townscape Started as an official manual on village planning The Anatomy of the Village followed on from the Scott Report for which Sharp had been one of the Secretaries When the Ministry decided not to proceed with the publication Sharp himself published it in 1946 It became one of Sharp's best known works with lucid prose and generous illustration by photograph and beautiful line drawings of village plans The aim of The Anatomy of the Village was to set out the main principles of village planning especially in relation to physical design Anatomy became a key text in thinking about villages in the post war period a period when there was great concern that settlements should develop in more sensitive ways than inter war ribbon and suburban development patterns The problems of poor quality development unrelated to settlement form was to continue to stimulate books such as Lionel Brett's Landscape in Distress and campaigns from the Architectural Review Reading the text today it still has much to offer while some of its assumptions about the level of services a village might support clearly belong to another era its beautiful and simple typological analyses of village form continue to be of relevance

Village Housing in the Tropics Jane Drew,Maxwell Fry,Harry L Ford,2013-11-26 Tropical Architecture although now a highly contested and debated term is the name given to European modern architecture that has been modified to suit the climatic and sometimes cultural context of hot countries These hot countries were labelled the tropics and were often European colonies or countries that had recently won their independence Fry Drew s book written on the threshold of the end of the British Empire was one of the first publications to offer practical advice to architects working in the tropics based on the empirical studies they conducted whilst based in British West Africa during the Second World War The book with its numerous illustrations plans and easy to follow explanations became a key manual for all architects working in hot climates and in particular those tasked with designing dwellings and small town plans Although the Royal Engineers and Schools of Tropical Medicine had long been designing and campaigning for better planning improved sanitation and had for example developed methods of cross ventilation this book became an instant hit Tropical Architecture suddenly bloomed into its own distinct canon and by 1955 the Architectural Association had set up a course specialising in tropical architecture led for a short time by Fry Village Housing in the Tropics had a significant impact when it was written on a profession that had had little guidance on working in hot climates and on architecture students and universities who began to modify their courses to accommodate different conditions Although from a post colonial perspective many scholars now associate this architecture as being a continuation of the Imperial mission this does not reduce the significance of the publication Indeed Tropical Architecture is regarded as being the forerunner to green architecture developing passive low energy buildings that are tailored to suit their climate and built with local materials A Polynesian Village Penisimani Tupunina,1977 The Village Woman in Ghana Jette Bukh,1979 The Ewe is spread across the border between Ghana and Togo Presents a case study of a village economy Tsito The Village in the South of China Jianhui Gao; ???,2016-06-30 The Normal Schools students studied for their future teaching career and some of them were in love with each other the bravery of the youngster who swam across the river at night was commendable life in the countryside was simple and hard but people tempered themselves through manual labour living there with wisdom and vitality the shoe shop keeper was a typical merchant who turned a tough face to life and seized any opportunity for pleasure Kinship and Demographic Behavior in the Past Tommy Bengtsson,Geraldine P. Iron in the Soul Peter Loizos, 2008-06-01 In his vivid lively account of how Greek Cypriot villagers coped with a thirty year displacement Peter Loizos follows a group of people whom he encountered as prosperous farmers in 1968 yet found as disoriented refugees when revisiting in 1975 By providing a forty year in depth perspective unusual in the social sciences this study yields unconventional insights into the deeper meanings of displacement It focuses on reconstruction of livelihoods conservation of family community social capital health both physical and mental religious and political perceptions The author argues for a closer collaboration between anthropology and the life sciences particularly medicine and social epidemiology but suggests that qualitative life history data have an important role to play in the understanding of how people cope with collective stress
