In The Bubble Designing In A Complex World:

In the Bubble John Thackara, 2006-02-17 How to design a world in which we rely less on stuff and more on people We're filling up the world with technology and devices but we've lost sight of an important question What is this stuff for What value does it add to our lives So asks author John Thackara in his new book In the Bubble Designing for a Complex World These are tough questions for the pushers of technology to answer Our economic system is centered on technology so it would be no small matter if tech ceased to be an end in itself in our daily lives Technology is not going to go away but the time to discuss the end it will serve is before we deploy it not after We need to ask what purpose will be served by the broadband communications smart materials wearable computing and connected appliances that we're unleashing upon the world We need to ask what impact all this stuff will have on our daily lives Who will look after it and how In the Bubble is about a world based less on stuff and more on people Thackara describes a transformation that is taking place now not in a remote science fiction future it's not about the schlock of the new but about radical innovation already emerging in daily life We are regaining respect for what people can do that technology can't In the Bubble describes services designed to help people carry out daily activities in new ways Many of these services involve technology ranging from body implants to wide-bodied jets But objects and systems play a supporting role in a people-centered world The design focus is on services not things And new principles above all lightness inform the way these services are designed and used At the heart of In the Bubble is a belief informed by a wealth of real-world examples that ethics and responsibility can inform design decisions without impeding social and technical innovation

Writing Design Grace Lees-Maffei, 2013-09-12 How do we learn about the objects that surround us As well as gathering sensory information by viewing and using objects we also learn about objects through the written and spoken word from shop labels to friends recommendations and from magazines to patents But even as design commentators have become increasingly preoccupied with issues of mediation the intersection of design and language remains under explored Writing Design provides a unique examination of what is at stake when we convert the material properties of designed goods into verbal or textual description Issues discussed include the role of text in informing design consumption designing with and through language and the challenges and opportunities raised by design without language Bringing together a wide range of scholars and practitioners Writing Design reveals the difficulties ethics and politics of writing about design

Design for Services Anna Meroni, Daniela Sangiorgi, 2016-04-08 In Design for Services Anna Meroni and Daniela

Sangiorgi articulate what Design is doing and can do for services and how this connects to existing fields of knowledge and practice. Designers previously saw their task as the conceptualisation, development and production of tangible objects. In the twenty first century a designer rarely designs something but rather designs for something. In the case of this publication for change, better experiences and better services. The authors reflect on this recent transformation in the practice, role and skills of designers by organising their book into three main sections. The first section links Design for Services to existing models and studies on services and service innovation. Section two presents multiple service design projects to illustrate and clarify the issues, practices and theories that characterise the discipline today. Using these case studies, the authors propose a conceptual framework that maps and describes the role of designers in the service economy. The final section projects the discipline into the emerging paradigms of a new economy to initiate a reflection on its future development.

Design for Global Challenges and Goals Emmanuel Tseklevs, Rachel Cooper, Jak Spencer, 2021-03-14. It presents 10 design-led case studies addressing different Sustainable Development Goals, ranging from reducing poverty and hunger, improving health and wellbeing, promoting gender equality, developing more sustainable cities and communities, encouraging more responsible consumption and production, and tackling climate change. Design for Global Challenges and Goals also addresses the future, offering foresight into the research in global challenges by identifying the opportunities and emerging trends for researchers. Empowering Users through Design David Bihanic, 2015-01-12. At the crossroads of various disciplines, this collective work examines the possibility of a new end-user engagement in ongoing digital technological products and services development. It provides an overview of recent research specifically focused on the user's democratic participation and empowerment. It also enables readers to better identify the main opportunities of participatory design, a concept which encourages the blurring of the role between user and designer. This allows people to escape their status as end-user and to elevate themselves to the level of creator. This book explores new avenues for rethinking the processes and practices of corporate innovation in order to cope with current socio-economic and technological changes. In so doing, it aims to help companies renew industrial models that allow them to design and produce new ranges of technological products and services by giving the user an active role in the development process, far beyond the basic role of consumer. Intended for designers, design researchers and scientists interested in innovation and technology management, this book also provides a valuable resource for professionals involved in technology-based innovation processes.
