Heterogeneity in Forest Structure Prior to Restoration by Fire Kurt Martin Menning, 2003 During a century of fire suppression forest may have become more homogeneous In many western forests fire is being reintroduced yet the effects are not well understood The best method of reintroducing fire to forested ecosystems has been debated To assess the effects of disturbance on structure we must quantify heterogeneity in the forest before and after disturbance I explored means to assess heterogeneity and measured it in the mixed conifer forest and in the litter base that vectors fire I present a new statistical metric for describing the distribution of forest structure The metric can be used to assess forest structural heterogeneity at different spatial scales Ground and surface fuels are essential for vectoring a contagious disturbance like fire Fire models often assume uniform fuel characteristics for a forest community I explored how litter bulk density could vary by dominant tree species I modeled how variability in litter bulk density could affect fire behavior and found differences in fireline intensity and rate of spread among different dominant tree species Adapted from abstract
