Language, Action, and Context Brigitte Nerlich, David D. Clarke, 1996-01-01 The roots of pragmatics reach back to Antiquity especially to rhetoric as one of the three liberal arts However until the end of the 18th century proto pragmatic insights tended to be consigned to the pragmatic that is rhetoric wastepaper basket and thus excluded from serious philosophical consideration It can be said that pragmatics was conceived between 1780 and 1830 in Britain but also in Germany and in France in post Lockian and post Kantian philosophies of language These early conceptions of pragmatics are described in the first part of the book The second part of the book looks at pragmatic insights made between 1830 and 1880 when they were once more relegated to the philosophical and linguistic underground The main stage was then occupied by a fact hunting historical comparative linguistics on the one hand and a newly spiritualised philosophy on the other In the last part the period between 1880 and 1930 is presented when pragmatic insights flourished and were sought after systematically This was due in part to a new upsurge in empiricism positivism and later behaviourism in philosophy linguistics and psychology Between 1780 and 1930 philosophers psychologists sociologists and linguists came to see that language could only be studied in the context of dialogue in the context of human life and finally as being a kind of human action itself such compulsive and inventive storytellers Extending current research in cognitive science and narratology she argues that we seem to have a genetic drive to fabricate as a way of gaining the competitive advantages such fictions give us She suggests that stories are a means of fusing causal and logical explanations of real events with emotional recognition so that the lessons taught to us as children and then throughout our lives via stories lay the cornerstones of our most crucial beliefs Nair s conclusion is that our stories really do make us up just as much as we make up our stories Affective

Auxiliation Tania Kuteva, 2004 Auxiliation describes the process by which auxiliary verbs such as do may must will and have develop from lexical verbs meaning exist possess hold etc The sequence of verb followed by complement turns into the grammatical structure of marker followed by main verb This transformation which involves morphosyntactic semantic and phonological changes can be seen operating in the same direction across many if not all languages There is no accepted theory to explain it Tania Kuteva presents a cross linguistic study of the phenomenon She seeks a to explore the cognitive forces underlying auxiliation b to shed light on how auxiliation relates to discourse and to pragmatic considerations and c to show the relation between the conceptual semantic and discourse pragmatic factors at work in the process Combining recent grammaticalization theory with insights from the psychology of language use the author also offers a new perspective on how grammaticalization occurs in everyday linguistic communication The book makes significant contributions to an explanatory theory of auxiliation to the study of language change and to the understanding of linguistic communication

The
Biologising of Childhood John R. Morss, 2017-12-06 Originally published in 1990 this book looks at the history of developmental psychology in order to locate and evaluate the role played by biology in its most influential formulations First Charles Darwin s own writings on child development are examined It is shown that Darwin endorsed such ideas as the recapitulation of evolutionary ancestry in the developing child even though this is inconsistent with his natural selection theory The first great developmentalists Hall Baldwin Freud adopted and applied these non Darwinian evolutionist ideas The next generation Vygotsky Piaget Werner applied similar ideas in a variety of ways Alongside this evolutionism but interconnected with it sensationist empiricist forms of epistemology were directing developmentalists from Rousseau onwards to see the child as having to work himself out of sense bound experience to develop further and further from the here and now Contemporary developmental theory retains these influences biological approaches ethological psychobiological remain pre Darwinian in spirit lifespan theories remain attached to biology formal cognitive approaches remain attached to sensationism Social context approaches are rather half hearted and it is only the social constructionist orientation which seems to offer a real alternative to biology Major conclusions are stated in chapter ten which includes a re evaluation of Darwin s role
