

Cameron's' book 'The Myth of Mars and Venus' examines and tries to dispose of several myths about supposed linguistic differences between the sexes, which are presented in John Gray's book 'Men are from Mars, Women are from Venus'. These myths (folklingustics) include:

1 Language and communication matter more to women than to men; women talk more than men.

2 Women are more verbally skilled than men.

3 Men's goals in using language tend to be about getting things done, whereas women's tend to be about making connections to other people. Men talk more about things and facts, whereas women talk more about people, relationships and feelings.

4 Men's way of using language is competitive, reflecting their general interest in acquiring and maintaining status; women's use of language is cooperative, reflecting their preference for equality and harmony.

5 These differences routinely lead to "miscommunication" between the sexes, with each sex misinterpreting the other's intentions. This causes problems in contexts where men and women regularly interact, and especially in heterosexual relationships.

Language, Gender, and Sex in Comparative Perspective Susan U. Philips, 1987-06-26 Most studies of gender differences in language use have been undertaken from exclusively either a sociocultural or a biological perspective By contrast this innovative volume places the analysis of language and gender in the context of a biocultural framework examining both cultural and biological sources of gender differences in language as well as the interaction between them The first two parts of the volume on cultural variation in gender differentiated language use comparing Western English speaking societies with societies elsewhere in the world The essays are distinguished by an emphasis on the syntax rather than style or strategy of gender differentiated forms of discourse but also often carry out the same forms differently through different choices of language form These gender differences are shown to be socially organized although the essays in Part I also raise the possibility that some cross cultural similarities in the ways males and females differentially use language may be related to sex based differences in physical and emotional makeup Part III examines the relationship between language and the brain and shows that although there are differences between the ways males and females process language in the brain these do not yield any differences in linguistic competence or language use Taken as a whole the essays reveal a great diversity in the cultural construction of gender through language and explicitly show that while there is some evidence of the influence of biologically based sex differences on the language of women and men the influence of culture is far greater and gender differences in language use are better accounted for in terms of culture than in terms of biology The collection will appeal widely to anthropologists psychologists linguists and other concerned with the understanding of gender roles Women, Men, and Language Jennifer Coates, 1986

Estudio en el que se analiza la existencia de posibles diferencias en la forma de hablar de hombres y mujeres Se utiliza como parámetros la clase social y el grupo de edad además del género Las diferencias de género se analizan fundamentalmente desde la interacción social básica que es la conversación y contemplando aspectos como la utilización de muletillas la frecuencia de silencios y pausas y los contenidos semánticos Se discute sobre las causas e implicaciones de estas diferencias lingüísticas La investigación se desarrolla en el ámbito del idioma inglés Language, Gender, and Society Barrie Thorne, Cheri Kramar, Nancy Henley, 1983 Language and the Sexes Wendy Martyna, 1980 An Introduction to the Theory of Gender-neutral Language Raoul Festante, 2007-09-26 Seminar paper from the year 2004 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Linguistics grade 2 University of Hannover course Language and Gender 5 entries in the bibliography language English abstract In the following paper I will deal with the concept of gender neutral language I will begin by looking at certain false generics that are commonly used in English Language and consider the position of gender neutral language theorists to these false generics Due to the fact that the gender neutral language theory offers very general recommendations and guidelines I felt difficult to do a corpus analysis That is why I tried to concentrate only on the main positions of gender neutral language theory and focus on central issues within the scope of this approach I concentrate on two particular false generics that are at the focus of gender neutral language theory Man as a generic form used in the English language to define male and female and the ambiguous use of the pronoun He in contexts where both sexes are to be addressed In the second and third chapter I will take a closer look at these false generics and exemplify how they create misunderstanding and actually promote a male centred perception In the fourth chapter I will deal with the guidelines and recommendations of language planners and gender neutral language theorists and work out their main positions It will be argued that language change is not an easy undertaking but requires perseverance and consistent argumentation The biggest challenge for language planners who want to implement genderneutral language is perhaps the persistent resistance towards the understanding that gender neutral language is not an issue concerning only feminists I will conclude by evaluating the gender neutral language theory in terms of its practicability and give a personal opinion on the approach

subject English Language and Literature Studies Linguistics grade 2 B Technical University of Braunschweig English Seminar 22 entries in the bibliography language English abstract Women are more emotional than men they speak in a different way than men but how are they spoken about Throughout the last century there has been a lot of discussion concerning language and gender Mainly linguists have focused on the different discourse strategies and conversational styles of women and men that is they dealt with the difference of women s and men s language Sexism became an important point of discussion in the 1960s and especially feminist critiques have discussed the sexist representation of women in language Many linguists tried to find alternatives for features of language that discriminate against women and thus sought to correct existing sex biases In a time where the inequality of the sexes is said to have diminished the anti sexism movement seems to have decreased as well People try to speak in a politically correct way a way that is not sexist or racist but certain stereotypes are nevertheless still part of the language system This can be seen when taking a closer look at the media which plays an important role in the process of language development Newspapers articles for example have to be objective and without bias but as they employ language that is politically correct with regard to common language usage they reflect the language of a society Consequently the media is a rich source for analysis when it comes to examining to what extent sexism is still an issue today Has the feminist fight against male supremacy been without effect The author discusses if sexism in language has diminished and how it is dealt with Therefore sexist language is defined and the relationship to society with the help of several linguistic approaches As part of this the different features of sexism
