Interfaces Between Language And Cognition Yury Y. Shtyrov,Andriy

Myachykov,Christoph Scheepers,2013-06-28 Cognitive mechanisms underlying linguistic communication do not only rely upon retrieval and processing of linguistic information they also involve constant updating and organizing of this linguistic information in relation with other more general cognitive mechanisms Some existing theoretical models assume such a tight interactive link between domain general and domain specific sources of information in the cognitive organization of the linguistic faculty and during language use Domain specific constraints may include for example grammatical as well as lexical and pragmatic knowledge Domain general constraints comprise processing limitations imposed by the cognitive mechanisms of memory attention learning and social interaction However much of the existing research tends to focus on one or the other of the aforementioned areas while integrative accounts are still rather sparse at present Therefore the aim of this Research Topic of Frontiers in Cognition is to bring together researchers who with in their respective research fields and by using different methodologies represent integrative approaches to the study of language We invite submissions from a wide range of interrelated areas of research cognitive architectures of language aspects of language processing linguistic development bilingualism language embodiment neuropsychology of linguistic function among others We would like to solicit original research contributions discussing behavioral neurophysiological and computational evidence as well as papers on methodological and or theoretical aspects of the interplay between linguistic and non linguistic cognitive processes

Bilingualism and cognitive control Judith F. Kroll,Ingrid Christoffels,Teresa Bajo, Research on bilingual language processing reveals an important role for control processes that enable bilinguals to negotiate the potential competition across their two languages The requirement for control that enables bilinguals to speak the intended language and to switch between languages has also been suggested to confer a set of cognitive consequences for executive function that extend beyond language to domain general cognitive skills Many recent studies have examined aspects of how cognitive control is manifest during bilingual language processing how individual differences in cognitive resources influence second language learning and performance and the range of cognitive tasks that appear to be influenced by bilingualism However not all studies demonstrate a bilingual advantage in all tasks that tap into cognitive control Indeed many questions are unanswered that are critical to our understanding of bilingual control What aspects of cognitive control are enhanced for proficient bilinguals How are individual differences in cognitive control related to language acquisition proficiency or professional translation skill How does the language environment affect concurrent processing How exactly does language control come about in tasks such as speech production switching between languages or translation When and how does inhibitory processing support language control The focus of this Research Topic is on executive control and bilingualism The goal is to have a broad scope that includes all of these issues We seek empirical contributions using different methodologies including behavioral computational and neuroscience approaches We also welcome theoretical contributions that provide detailed discussion of models or mechanisms that account for the relationship between bilingualism and cognitive control We aim to provide a platform for new contributions that represent a state of the art overview of approaches to cognitive control in bilingualism We hope that this Research Topic will enable the field to formulate more precise hypotheses and causal models on the relation between individual differences cognitive control and bilingual language processing

History and Perspectives of Language Study Olga Mišeska Tomić, Milorad Radovanović, 2000 Each of the contributions in this volume expresses in some way the hope that it is possible to achieve an integrity of linguistics understood as a science of man in its psychological sociological pragmatic and cultural context The first section focuses on the history of language study the second section on the integrative description of facets of language and the last section on the need for the study of language in context
