2e et 3e cycles Cognitive Self Change Jack Bush, Daryl M. Harris, Richard J. Parker, 2016-05-23 COGNITIVE SELF CHANGE The consensus amongst the leading researchers in the offender treatment area is that the comprehensive and sophisticated clinical methods the authors have derived for offender treatment are unsurpassed. Indeed, they have formed the basis for what is known as the core correctional practices for reducing anti-social behavior. Paul Gendreau, Professor Emeritus, University of New Brunswick. Bush and colleagues' phenomenologically based approach to offender rehabilitation is based explicitly on the stories they have collected from prisoners and probationers and is a welcome contribution to an academic literature that too often obfuscates the actual work involved in delivering help to the hardest to reach in the criminal justice system. Shadd Maruna, Ph.D., Dean of the Rutgers School of Criminal Justice. Cognitive Self Change presents a practical guide to rehabilitation based on understanding the way individual offenders experience themselves and the world around them at the moment they offend. De-incentivizing criminal behavior and replacing it with self-empowered change are the keys to upending the traditionally antagonistic relationship between criminals and those meant to help them change. The authors, with their experience of working with offenders and implementing rehabilitation programs, have drawn together clinical and academic perspectives on the treatment of high-risk offenders, analyzing current approaches to treatment and the problems encountered in their application. Cognitive Self Change rejects the traditional dichotomy of control versus treatment, devising instead a strategy that integrates both. Focusing on high-risk and hard-core offenders, not just those that are ready to change, they discuss why offenders offend, why they are seldom motivated to change, and why they often fail to engage in treatment. This leads to a strategy of communication that teaches offenders a set of skills they can use to change themselves and that motivates them to do so.

Forensic CBT Raymond Chip Tafrate, Damon Mitchell, 2013-09-16 Forensic CBT: A Handbook for Clinical Practice is an edited collection that represents the first authoritative resource on the utilization of CBT strategies and techniques for offender clients. Features contributions from leaders of the major schools of CBT on the treatment of antisocial personality patterns as well as anger, interpersonal violence, substance abuse, and sexual aggression. Addresses modified CBT approaches for female, juvenile, and culturally diverse forensic populations. Covers emerging areas of forensic practices including the integration of motivational interviewing and strength-based approaches. Includes an assortment of worksheets, handouts, and exercises for practitioners to use with their clients.

Speech and Language Therapy Myra Kersner, Jannet A. Wright, 2013-03-01 Now in its second edition, Speech and Language Therapy: the decision-making process when working with children reveals how recent research and changes in health and education services have affected the decision-making process in the assessment and management of children with speech and language problems. With individual chapters written by experts in their field, this book illustrates how the decisions made by practitioners may vary within different work settings. Shows how these decisions may need to be adapted when working with specific client groups. Explores how such decisions are part of effective evidence-based practice. Offers an overview of the skills required by the developing professional Provides insight into working as a newly qualified therapist in the current job market Rigorously underpinned with current research and revised legislation this is an important textbook for speech and language therapy students potential students and specialist teachers in training Speech and Language Therapy the decision making process when working with children will also be relevant to newly qualified therapists therapists returning to the profession specialist teachers and Special Educational Needs Coordinators
