Imperial Babel Padma Rangarajan, 2014-09-15 At the heart of every colonial encounter lies an act of translation Once dismissed as a derivative process the new cultural turn in translation studies has opened the field to dynamic considerations of the contexts that shape translations and that in turn reveal translation's truer function as a locus of power In Imperial Babel Padma Rangarajan explores translation's complex role in shaping literary and political relationships between India and Britain Unlike other readings that cast colonial translation as primarily a tool for oppression Rangarajan argues that translation changed both colonizer and colonized and undermined colonial hegemony as much as it abetted it Imperial Babel explores the diverse political and cultural consequences of a variety of texts from eighteenth century oriental tales to mystic poetry of the fin de siècle and from translation proper to its ethnological mythographic and religious variants Searching for translation's trace enables a broader more complex understanding of intellectual exchange in imperial culture as well as a more nuanced awareness of the dialectical relationship between colonial policy and nineteenth century literature Rangarajan argues that while bearing witness to the violence that underwrites translation in colonial spaces we should also remain open to the irresolution of translation its unfixed nature and its ability to transform both languages in which it works

As Mirrors Are Lonely Peter Guy, 2014-10-16 The Irish novel has demonstrated an ability to sample other forms and influences to improvise and evolve in the light of changing circumstances Peter Guy's new study helps investigate the way in which Irish writers since the sixties have responded to these influences re-examining their work through the theory of the French theorist Jacques Lacan Focusing on the novelists John McGahern Brian Moore and John Broderick in a simultaneous reading and applying a psychoanalytical theory which centers in particular on gender and family relations this new study also covers a number of other complex issues issues which span the claustrophobic and repressive atmosphere of the 1950s to the secular ahistorical Ireland of today

Memory Ireland Oona Frawley, 2012-03-29 In the second volume of a series that will ultimately include four the authors consider Irish diasporic memory and memory practices While the Irish diaspora has become the subject of a wide range of scholarship there has been little work focused on its relationship to memory The first half of the volume asks how diasporic memory functions in different places and times and what forms it takes on As an island nation with a history of emigration Ireland has developed a rich diasporic cultural memory one that draws on multiple traditions and historiographies of both home and away Native traditions are not imported wholesale but instead develop their own curious hybridity reflecting the nature of emigrant memory that absorbs new ways of thinking about home How do immigrants remember their homeland How do descendants of immigrants remember a land they rarely visit How does diasporic memory pass through families and how is it represented in cultural forms such as literature festivals and souvenirs In its second half this volume shifts its attention to the concept of memory practices ways of cultural remembering that result from and are shaped by particular cultural forms Many of these cultural forms embody memory materially through language music and photography and because of their distinctive expressions of culture give rise to distinctive memory practices Gathering the leading voices in Irish studies this volume opens new pathways into the body of Irish cultural memory demonstrating time and again the ways in which memory is supported by the negotiations of individuals within wider cultural contexts Contributors include Aidan Arrowsmith Hasia Diner Joep Leerssen Paul Muldoon Nuala Ní Dhomhnaill

The Irish Classical Self Laurie O'Higgins, 2017-03-01 The Irish Classical Self considers the role of classical languages and learning in the construction of Irish cultural identities in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries focusing in particular on the lower ranks of society This eighteenth century notion of the classical self grew partly out of influential identity narratives developed in the seventeenth century by clerics on the European continent responding to influential critiques of the Irish as ignorant barbarians they published works demonstrating the value and antiquity of indigenous culture and made traditional annalistic claims about the antiquity of Irish and connections between Ireland and the biblical and classical world broadly known In the eighteenth century these and related ideas spread through Irish poetry which demonstrated the complex and continuing interaction of languages in the country a story of conflict but also of communication and amity The classical strain in the context of the non elite may seem like an unlikely phenomenon but the volume exposes the truth in the legend of the classical hedge schools which offered tuition in Latin and Greek to poor students for whom learning and claims to learning had particular meaning and power This volume surveys official data on schools and scholars together with literary and other narratives showing how the schools inherently transgressive because of the Penal Laws drove concerns about class and political loyalty and inspired seductive but contentious retrospectives It demonstrates that classical interests among those in the humbler walks of life ran in the same channels as interests in Irish literature and contemporary Irish poetry and demands a closer look at the phenomenon in its entirety Rebel by vocation Niall Carson, 2016-03-02 This is a comprehensive study of one of the most influential literary groups in post independence Ireland the writers and editors of the literary magazine The Bell Sean O Faolain and the generation of writers that matured in the shadows of W B Yeats and James Joyce dominated the literary landscape in Ireland in the build up to and during the Second World War This is their story as told through the history of one journal The Bell Working with previously unpublished archival material this study looks to illuminate the relationships disputes and loves of the contributors to Ireland's most important little magazine under the guiding influence of its founding editor Sean O Faolain In doing so it sheds new light on O Faolain's early influences and his attitude towards the Church and the state in Ireland Flesh and Word Sarah Künzler, 2016-08-22 Bodies and their role in cultural discourse have been a constant focus in the humanities and social sciences in recent years but comparatively few studies exist about Old Norse Icelandic or early Irish literature This study aims to redress this imbalance and presents carefully contextualised close readings of medieval texts The chapters focus on the role of bodies in mediality discourse in various contexts that of identity in relation to ideas about self and other of inscribed and marked skin and of natural bodily matters such as defecation urination and menstruation By carefully discussing the sources in their cultural contexts it becomes apparent that medieval Scandinavian and early Irish texts present their very own ideas about bodies and their role in structuring the narrated worlds of the texts The study presents one of the first systematic examinations of bodies in these two literary traditions in terms of body criticism and emphasises the ingenuity and complexity of medieval texts Hermeneutics and the Problem of Translating Traditional Arabic Texts Alsayed M. Aly Ismail, 2017-08-21 This book focuses on the problematic issues arising when translating and interpreting classical Arabic texts which represent a challenging business for many scholars especially with regards to religious texts Additionally the reception of these interpretations and translations not only informs the perception of Muslims and their awareness of the outside world but also impacts the vision and perception of non Muslims of Islam and the Muslim world Consequently this book reconsiders the concepts of understanding and interpretation and their nexus in the mechanism of translation and proposes a novel hermeneutic method of translating interpreting and understanding traditional and classical Arab texts Handling the issues of understanding from a hermeneutical perspective is shown here to remove the possibility of translation and interpretation rendering a distorted translated text Drawing on the powerful interpretive theories of Hans Georg Gadamer and Martin Heidegger the hermeneutic method of translation starts from a premise that the meaning of a classical text cannot be deduced solely by linguistic analysis of its words but requires in depth investigation of the invisible contextual elements that control and shape its meaning Traditional texts are seen in this model as travelling texts whose meaning is transformed across time and space The hermeneutic method of translation allows the translator to identify those elements from the real world that informed a classical text at the time of its writing so that it can be adapted and made relevant to its contemporary context Traditional texts can enlighten our minds and cultivate our souls religious texts can elevate our behavior and thinking and help refine our confused contemporary lives When texts become isolated from their world they lose this lofty goal of enlightenment and elevation
