Essential Questions

Life During the Great Depression

While the United States has had its economic ups and downs, nothing has approached the depths of the Great Depression of the 1930s. There was no support system such as social security, welfare, or food stamps to help the unemployed like we have now. My family lived through the Great Depression, and I can tell you about the hardships we faced.

Sharecroppers were farmers who worked someone else's land and gave up some of the harvest. My father

A family looking for work, 1935

Essential Question

How do we compete for what we want?

The Three Recruits

Once upon a time, a farmer, an artisan, and a laborer lived in a peaceful kingdom. The farmer, Fergus, tended several acres of cabbage and wheat while Ian, the laborer, toiled away mending the dirty streets and mending fences.

The artisan, Armand, crafted sturdy pieces of furniture. He made everything from tables and chairs to picture frames and coat racks. Day after day, the three friends worked from sunrise to sunset, contributing their skills to the kingdom. They were paid a weekly wage, comfortably, but there was not a lot of money in the kingdom.

The kingdom was hit with a drought that had never had to fight. The king and kingdom left them alone. The king said that they were dismissed.

One day, Fergus, Armand, and Ian were told to continue to work, no matter how dry the kingdom. They may be able to earn a living as a laborer, but they have done nothing but enjoy the life provided. They produce nothing, and it is
