Fazal Sheikh Moksha:

Fazal Sheikh: Moksha, 2005-11-28 For 500 years the holy city of Vrindavan in northern India has been a haven for India's dispossessed widows. Cast out by their families and condemned by strict marital laws that deny them legal economic and in extreme cases even human rights they have made their way to the city to worship at its temples and live in its ashrams surviving on charitable handouts or begging on the streets. In Vrindavan they worship the young god Krishna who invades their dreams helping them to cast off memories from their past lives and prepare for new and better lives to come. Their ultimate dream is to reach Moksha heaven where they will find freedom from the cycle of death and rebirth and live surrounded by their gods forever. Fazal Sheikh's photographs capture the meditative mood of the city and his portraits of the widows convey their sense of acceptance of life's nearing its end and a longing for what is to come. As in his previous books he spent time with his subjects listening to their stories many of which reveal the suffering caused by traditions that still govern Indian society. Through his depiction of the city and its inhabitants Fazal Sheikh once again contributes to our knowledge and understanding of a community whose existence to those who live outside it remains closed. Beloved Daughters Fazal Sheikh, ActionAid-India (Organization), Joel Smith, Fondation Henri Cartier-Bresson, Open Society Institute, 2007. Collection of 30 portraits of Indian women printed on one side of sheet only with textual comments on women's lives in modern India.

Pedagogies of the Image Hannah M. Tavares, 2016-06-15 This work considers the potential of photographs for orienting in a critical direction the scope, questions and interests of the disciplinary conventions of the field of educational inquiry. Visual objects may help illuminate broader socio-historical events and logics that are deeply entwined with education yet remain marginal to or outside of what constitutes its domain of study. In this work photographic images are treated as resources for re-visioning the founding disciplinary objects of educational studies by reorienting its proper objects of study: traditional archives, persistent categories, frames of reference and accepted portals of research and inquiry. A theoretic framing shapes the question taken up in this work: How might an engagement with photo archives open new horizons in the study of education from a postfoundationalist, multi-theoretic and cross-disciplinary perspective? The author constructs a rather unconventional vantage point to explore this question that opens on to the discursive spaces of three photographs made of three women in the years 1897, 1949 and 1966. The photographs are analysed from three theoretic approaches. First it is indicated how each photographic image not only marks a relationship to the past, the present and the future but to the rules and conventions of photographic practices. These particular images give an account of what both persists and exceeds the photographic image and permit to rewrite the bodies and lives pictured. Second, the subject matter of each photographic image while singular and local bears witness to the complex network of racial, patriarchal and colonial logics and their profound imbrication with a technically mediated inscription. For all their singularity the photographs cannot but evoke their relation to the deeply historical character of photography. Finally the photographs make possible an account of broader occurrences subterranean histories contexts and differently situated experiences that illuminate much like the principle of montage a sequence of overlapping events crosscutting with one another consequently throwing open the possibility of responding to and transforming the histories and archives we are given This book Pedagogies of the Image is a winner of the 2017 American Educational Studies Association Critics Choice Award American Photo - ND ,2007-05

Princeton Alumni Weekly ,2004 Aperture Aperture Foundation,2005 The New Faces of Christianity Philip Jenkins,2006-09-01 Named one of the top religion books of 2002 by USA Today Philip Jenkins s phenomenally successful The Next Christendom permanently changed the way people think about the future of Christianity In that volume Jenkins called the world s attention to the little noticed fact that Christianity s center of gravity was moving inexorably southward to the point that Africa may soon be home to the world s largest Christian populations Now in this brilliant sequel Jenkins takes a much closer look at Christianity in the global South revealing what it is like and what it means for the future The faith of the South Jenkins finds is first and foremost a biblical faith Indeed in the global South many Christians identify powerfully with the world portrayed in the New Testament an agricultural world very much like their own marked by famine and plague poverty and exile until very recently a society of peasants farmers and small craftsmen In the global South as in the biblical world belief in spirits and witchcraft are commonplace and in many places such as Nigeria Indonesia and Sudan Christians are persecuted just as early Christians were Thus the Bible speaks to the global South with a vividness and authenticity simply unavailable to most believers in the industrialized North More important Jenkins shows that throughout the global South believers are reading the Bible with fresh eyes and coming away with new and sometimes startling interpretations Some of their conclusions are distinctly fundamentalist but Jenkins finds an intriguing paradox for they are also finding ideas in the Bible that are socially liberating especially with respect to women s rights Across Africa Asia and Latin America such Christians are social activists in the forefront of a wide range of liberation movements It s hard to overstate how interesting how eye opening how frequently surprising and sometimes disturbing Jenkins findings are Anyone interested in the implications of these trends for the major denominations for Muslim Christian conflict and for global politics will find The New Faces of Christianity provocative and incisive and indispensable Moksha Fazal Sheikh,2005 For five hundred years the holy city of Vrindavan in northern India has been a haven for India s dispossessed widows Cast out by their families and condemned by strict marital laws which deny them legal economic and in extreme cases their human rights they have made their way to the city to worship at its temples and live in its ashrams surviving on charitable hand outs or begging on the streets In Vrindavan they worship the young god Krishna who invades their dreams helping them to cast off memories from their past life and prepare for a new and better life to come Their ultimate dream is to reach moksha heaven where they will find freedom from the cycle of death and rebirth and live surrounded by their gods forever Fazal Sheikh s landscape photographs capture the meditative mood of the city and his portraits of the widows convey their sense of acceptance of life

women taken in India over the past five years to trace the passage of life from birth to death In his two previous books Moksha and Ladli Sheikh has addressed the social and political implications of the ways in which women are subordinated and mistreated in India recording many stories of isolation and extreme abuse He has recognized the way Indian women use their religion to rationalize the tragedies in their lives and the insidious way traditional beliefs encourage consolation rather than revolt In The Circle Sheikh concentrates on the power of the individual gaze its ability to engage our empathy and our curiosity The series of direct portraits reflects an intimacy between photographer and subject that does not form part of our collective notion of India and its women In inviting the viewer to study these faces Fazal Sheikh hopes to reflect their dignity their endurance and often despite everything a prevailing sense of calm BOOK JACKET MacArthur Fellows ,2005
