Fear Of Crime:

Fear of Crime Murray Lee, Stephen Farrall, 2008-07-03 Why is fear of crime so rife in society today The government and media have ploughed money and resources into surveys and initiatives to find out As a concept fear of crime has produced considerable academic debate and this book brings together a collection of new and cutting edge articles from key scholars in criminology which question the orthodoxy of fear of crime models The Fear of Crime Jason Ditton, Stephen Farrall, 2017-07-05 Studies of the fear of crime have constituted what is undeniably the fastest growing research area within criminology in the last decade and this shows no sign of diminishing The editors have a distinguished record of innovative research in the field being responsible for a number of seminal empirical and theoretical articles In this volume they have collected together and for the first time all the most significant contributions to the field The collection includes an introductory essay by the editors and articles reflecting an overview of the field the causes of vulnerability the sources of information on victimisation the methods used to survey fear the theoretical models employed to explain it and the nature of policies designed to reduce fear Fear of Crime Helmut Kury, 2008 Fear of Crime Kenneth F. Ferraro, 1995-03-09 Ferraro examines how people interpret their risk of criminal victimization and identifies who is most likely to be afraid of crime Although many previous studies of fear of crime do not explicitly consider the concept of risk or perceived risk in estimating the prevalence of fear the approach taken here considers perceived risk as central to the entire interpretive process It links national survey data on how people think about crime to official crime rates in America and uses the comprehensive set of environmental and personal variables on a nationally representative sample to examine how fear develops for ten different types of crime Fear of Crime Greta W. Salem, Dan A. Lewis, 2016-04-30 Mass incarceration and lower crime rates have not made city dwellers feel safe Programs designed to deal with this problem focus on increased police protection In this study Lewis and Salem question the validity of these assumptions and the effectiveness of this approach Their five year investigation challenged theories that focused only on the psychological responses to victimization and failed to take into account the social and political environments within which such fears are created From a social control perspective which informs their research and analysis the authors examined the fear of crime in ten neighborhoods in Chicago San Francisco and Philadelphia which represent the range of communities typically found in urban areas The authors contend that fear of crime is not related to exposure or knowledge about criminal events alone but also stems from residents concerns about changes in their neighborhoods Many people they argue are afraid of crime because they believe that they have lost control over their local communities Their conclusions remain as valid as when this book was first published in 1986 Lewis and Salem consider ways to restore the control that community residents feel they have lost and consider the possibilities for a more equitable distribution of security in urban areas Fear of Crime and Punitiveness Helmut Kury, 2013 As a subject area of inquiry and research fear of crime and punitiveness have played an increasingly important role in criminology Since the early 1990s and emanating largely from within the United States there has been a growing body of research as well as increased attention given to the subject by the media and policy makers In part triggered by the fact that the United States has the highest imprisonment rate approx 780 100 000 in 2012 in the Western world and still has the death penalty in most states increasing attention has been paid to the impact of peoples perceptions of crime their fear of possible victimization and their sense of punitivity towards offenders And although the body of literature on fear of crime and punitivity has been growing there still remain many regions and countries of the world where there is a dearth of such research This collection includes several of the countries where such research represents the first of its kind The reader will be provided a broad overview of the subject and presented with varied observations about fear of crime and punitivity from different parts of the world As the project represents a novel and exploratory venture into the subject area the collective content provided in this collection will hopefully also serve to advance future research and inform sentencing policy and initiatives to address fear of crime This volume includes seven comparable reports in which the contributors used a common standardized survey to collect data on fear of crime and punitivity among post secondary students The countries represent a cross section of different legal political and cultural systems The countries also vary in their degree of criminal justice development and in terms of the rights of victims In each of the contributions the authors provide an overview of their country before discussing the results of the survey they administered The articles are prepared in a manner that allow varying degrees of comparison as well as recommendations for the future direction of this relatively new area of international inquiry Cover Inventing Fear of Crime Murray Lee, 2013-06-17 The notion of the fear of crime has become as important as crime itself This book analyses the emergence of the fear of crime as a meaningful concept in both social enquiry and governmental and political discourse particularly in the UK Australia and New Zealand and North America

The Routledge International Handbook on Fear of Crime Murray Lee, Gabe Mythen, 2017-12-01 The Routledge International Handbook on Fear of Crime brings together original and international state of the art contributions of theoretical empirical policy related scholarship on the intersection of perceptions of crime victimisation vulnerability and risk This is timely as fear of crime has now been a focus of scholarly and policy interest for some fifty years and shows little sign of abating Research on fear of crime is demonstrative of the inter disciplinary nature of criminology drawing in the disciplines of sociology psychology political science history cultural studies gender studies planning and architecture philosophy and human geography This collection draws in many of these interdisciplinary themes This collection also extends the boundaries of fear of crime research It does this both methodologically and conceptually but perhaps more importantly it moves us beyond some of the often repeated debates in this field to focus on novel topics from unique perspectives The book begins by plotting the history of fear of crime's development then moves on to investigate the methodological and theoretical debates that have ensued and the policy transfer that occurred across jurisdictions Key elements in debates and research on fear of crime concerning gender race and ethnicity are covered as are contemporary themes in fear of crime research such as regulation security risk and the fear of terrorism the mapping of fear of crime and fear of crime beyond urban landscapes The final sections of the book explore geographies of fear and future and unique directions for this research Fear of Crime and Perceived Risk: Oxford Bibliographies Online Research Guide Oxford University Press,2010-05-01 This ebook is a selective guide designed to help scholars and students of criminology find reliable sources of information by directing them to the best available scholarly materials in whatever form or format they appear from books chapters and journal articles to online archives electronic data sets and blogs Written by a leading international authority on the subject the ebook provides bibliographic information supported by direct recommendations about which sources to consult and editorial commentary to make it clear how the cited sources are interrelated related A reader will discover for instance the most reliable introductions and overviews to the topic and the most important publications on various areas of scholarly interest within this topic In criminology as in other disciplines researchers at all levels are drowning in potentially useful scholarly information and this guide has been created as a tool for cutting through that material to find the exact source you need This ebook is a static version of an article from Oxford Bibliographies Online Criminology a dynamic continuously updated online resource designed to provide authoritative guidance through scholarship and other materials relevant to the study and practice of criminology Oxford Bibliographies Online covers most subject disciplines within the social science and humanities for more information visit www.aboutobo.com Fear of Crime Among the Elderly Mary Dale Craig,2018-10-24 This multimethod study of crime and the elderly in a small town setting approaches the related issues from varied perspectives and ultimately presents a different picture of fear of crime among the elderly than that which dominates the current literature Three features contribute to this book s uniqueness The first is a departure from the urban view the second is an emphasis on phenomenology and the third is multimethodology With an emphasis on qualitative research this study allows the elderly and other key informants to present their own portrait relative to crime a portrait that is far more contextually varied and far less dominated by fear and vulnerability than is commonly assumed Policing and the Fear of Crime Mark Harrison Moore,Robert C. Trojanowicz,1988 Fear of Crime Kenneth F. Ferraro,1995-01-01 This is an examination of the factors that contribute to the risk of being victimized such as crime rates and environmental and personal variables City Life and Delinquency - Victimization, Fear of Crime, and Gang Membership Leonard D.
