Rabbitt,1954 A Campaign of Quiet Persuasion Jan Bates Wheeler,2013-11-11 In 1960 the College Entrance Examination Board became an unexpected participant in the movement to desegregate education in the South Working with its partner Educational Testing Services the College Board quietly integrated its Scholastic Aptitude Test SAT centers throughout the Deep South Traveling from state to state taking one school district and even one school at a time two College Board staff members both native southerners waged a campaign of quiet persuasion and succeeded establishing a roster of desegregated test centers within segregated school districts while the historic battle for civil rights raged around them In the context of the larger struggle for equal opportunities for southern black students their work addressed a small but critical barrier to higher education Shedding light on this remarkable story for the first time Jan Bates Wheeler tells how the College Board staff members Ben Cameron and Ben Gibson succeeded Their candid and thoughtfully written records of conversations and confrontations untouched for nearly fifty years reveal the persistence required to reach a goal many thought unachievable and even foolhardy Indeed their task placed them in the unusual position of advocating for school desegregation on a day to day basis as part of their jobs This positioned Cameron and Gibson squarely in opposition to prevailing laws customs and attitudes an ill advised stance for any nascent business venture particularly one experiencing competition from a new rival testing organization purported to accommodate openly those same laws customs and attitudes Cameron and Gibson also accepted the personal danger involved in confrontations with racist school officials The officials who cooperated with the pair assumed even greater risk and in order to minimize that threat Cameron and Gibson pledged not to publicize their efforts Even years after their work had ended the two men refused to write about their campaign for fear of compromising the people who had helped them Their concerns according to Wheeler kept this remarkable story largely untold until now

Interstate Commerce Commission Reports, 1961 The Politics of Peace Petra Goedde, 2019-01-12 During a television broadcast in 1959 US President Dwight D Eisenhower remarked that people in the long run are going to do more to promote peace than our governments Indeed I think that people want peace so much that one of these days our governments had better get out of the way and let them have it At that very moment international peace organizations were bypassing national governments to create alternative institutions for the promotion of world peace and mounting the first serious challenge to the state centered conduct of international relations This study explores the emerging politics of peace both as an ideal and as a pragmatic aspect of international relations during the early cold war It traces the myriad ways in which a broad spectrum of people involved in and affected by the cold war used altered and fought over a seemingly universal concept These dynamic interactions involved three sets of global actors cold war states peace advocacy groups and anti colonial liberationists These transnational networks challenged and eventually undermined the cold war order They did so not just with reference to the United States the Soviet Union and Western Europe but also by addressing the violence of national liberation movements in the Third World As Petra Goedde shows in this work deterritorializing the cold war reveals the fractures that emerged within each cold war camp as activists both challenged their own governments over the right path toward global peace and challenged each other over the best strategy to achieve it The Politics of Peace demonstrates that the scientists journalists publishers feminists and religious leaders who drove the international discourse on peace after World War II laid the groundwork for the eventual political transformation of the Cold War Bank & Thrift Branch Office Data Book, 2001
