Coming of Age in Academe Jane Roland Martin, 2013-10-28 First Published in 2000 At what price entry Philosopher of education Jane Roland Martin contends that feminist scholars have traded in their idealism for a place in the academy In Coming of Age in Academe she looks at the ways that academic feminists have become estranged from women Determining that this is the membership fee the academy exacts on all its members she calls for the academy's transformation Part one explores the chilly research climate for feminist scholars the academic traps of essentialism and aerial distance and the education gap in the feminist text In part two Martin likens the behavior of present day feminist scholars to nineteenth century immigrants to the United States and examines their assimilation into the world of work politics and the professions She finds that when you look at higher education you see what a brutal filter of women it is Part three highlights the academy's brain drain and its containment of women and then proposes actions both great and small that aim at fundamental change In this rousing call to action Martin concludes that the dissociation from women that the academy demands its entrance fee can only be stopped by radically reforming the gendered system on which the academy is based

The Impact of Feminist Research in the Academy Christie Farnham, 1987-01-01 The Dissenting Feminist Academy Gisele Marie Thibault, 1987 This book is a general statement about universities and about the universities response to and interaction with feminism From the late nineteenth century to the current decade feminists have confronted the university structure infiltrated it as they have resisted and rejected it Within the parameters of this tension and contradiction feminist scholarship has paradoxically transformed the nature and content of academe while it has fought against the barriers higher education has imposed to both feminist philosophy and to women In this analysis the author explores how such a contradiction was manifested in the mid to late nineteenth century university in the late 1960s and in the 1980s in the modern research university in North America She examines how the university as we know it politically economically and socially implements women's subordination through its institutional polity its academic disciplines and its ideological aerobics in promoting the private public spheres Finally the author boldly suggests that the dissent of feminism offers perhaps the greatest and the most plausible alternative both to the ills which beset the contemporary academy and to the future of academe In a word such an academy must be created or face intellectual extinction not just for women but for humanity

Anti-feminism in the Academy Veve Clark, Shirley Nelson Garner, Margaret Higonnet, Ketu Katrak, 2014-01-27 Contending that the anti feminist backlash in the academy is part of the broader politically correct rhetoric this collection of writers academics and activists is a much needed response to the assault on feminist thinkers and critics in the academy today
