Art Information and the Internet Lois Swan Jones,2013-12-16 In the first book of its kind art information expert Lois Swan Jones discusses how to locate visual and textual information on the Internet and how to evaluate and supplement that information with material from other formats print sources CD ROMS documentary videos and microfiche sets to produce excellent research results The book is divided into three sections Basic Information Formats Types of Websites and How to Find Them and How to Use Web Information Jones discusses the strengths and limitations of Websites scholarly and basic information resources are noted and search strategies for finding pertinent Websites are included Art Information and the Internet also discusses research methodology for studying art historical styles artists working in various media individual works of art and non Western cultures as well as art education writing about art problems of copyright and issues concerning the buying and selling of art This title will be periodically updated High-Level Subject Access Tools and Techniques in Internet Cataloging Judith Ahronheim,2024-11-15 Is your library s portal as efficient as it could be High Level Subject Access Tools and Techniques explores the potential and early development of high level subject access It examines Web tools and traditionally maintained library structures that facilitate the automated relation of resources to high level subject categories based on the descriptive metadata that already exists in traditional library records It includes a research study of high level subject browse structures as well as hands on reports of actual projects and development activities and an examination of the environment in which demand for high level subject access arises From the editor As the World Wide Web and graphic user interfaces developed in the 90s libraries began to build gateways for their online resources. These gateways allowed library users to employ the browse point and click approach to resource discovery that they had come to expect from online tools. Most of these interfaces amounted to little more than hand constructed lists of links. Today many libraries offer access to users through a set list of broad topics sometimes called a high level browse display. Methods for populating these subject categories remain crude and their maintenance requires considerable resources. As a result libraries have begun to look at ways of applying traditional techniques associated with cataloging to these new interfaces. Several goals are involved in these developments. Many hope to reuse data from library catalogs and thus limit maintenance burdens. Others seek to apply a more standard set of tools and principles to the construction of portals to allow greater cooperation among institutions that want to interoperate with each other. This pathbreaking book examines vital issues in high level subject access including subject trees and their relationship to the structure inherent in Dewey Classification, emerging patterns in the development of browsing services including a hierarchy of subjects that is not based in classification, a map that relates data from catalog records to the subject hierarchy and tools for extracting data from a catalog and storing it in a separate database to produce a more flexible display task based as opposed to materials based subject lists, the social issues that are associated with choosing categories based on the nature and activity of an institution's library users, the political issues involved in selecting disciplines or topics for a browsing service. And presents fascinating case studies of Columbia University's efforts to build an automatically generated browsable display based on Library of Congress Classification as it occurs in catalog records, the High Level Thesaurus Project HILT in which a group of libraries, archives and museums attempted to find a common method for high level subject access via portal.

Arts Digest, 1929 College of Fine Arts Catalogue Carnegie Institute of Technology. College of Fine Arts, 1922 Art Career Guide Donald Holden, 1973 "Fashion, Interior Design and the Contours of Modern Identity " Alla Myzelev, 2017-07-05

Challenging the notion that fashion and furniture were or are separate enterprises and distinct material aesthetic traditions, this collection focuses on three material and conceptual links central to understanding the relationship between interior design and fashion: the body, fabric and space. The volume considers the changing visual material and spatial character, methodological challenges posed by and formal, political and historiographical significance of a wide range of British, European and North American case studies since the eighteenth century. The volume's eleven case studies allow the reader to understand connecting notions behind the formation of interiors and fashionable clothing. The essays combine a wide range of significant and challenging new examples alongside powerful revisionary analyses of the various periods, artists, designers and their best and significant objects.

Fashion, Interior Design and the Contours of Modern Identity is concerned not only with fabric but also with the body and the implications of embodiment in the practices of both design domains which are equally invested in the comfort, aesthetic pleasure, extension and support of the body in different and yet seemingly identical ways.
