Parents in the Spotlight Tanja Betz, Michael-Sebastian Honig, Ilona Ostner, 2017-07-17 Children and parents have become a focus of debates on new social risks in European welfare states Policymaking elites have converged in defining such risks and they have outlined new forms of parenting support to better safeguard children and activate their potential. Increasingly parents are suspected of falling short of public expectations. Contributors to this special issue scrutinize this shift towards parenting as performance and analyse recent forms of parenting support.

EBOOK: Promoting Positive Behaviour in the Early Years Karen Morris, 2015-07-16 Behaviour is high on the political agenda and a key concern for many education professionals. Whilst political debate, press coverage and professional concerns about problem behaviour generally focus on older children, there is also concern about the number of children exhibiting challenging behaviour in the early years. Children's experiences in the Early Years are crucial in determining their adaptability and coping strategies later on in helping them develop resilience. Therefore it is paramount that practitioners can support children's personal, social and emotional and behavioural development in the early years and make a vital contribution to reducing behavioural difficulties, including internalised difficulties such as depression as well as externalised challenging behaviour. Those working in the early years often want advice on managing challenging behaviour, sometimes seeing such behaviour as being inexplicable rather than regarding all children's behaviour, including challenging behaviour as a response to their circumstances. When the behaviour is extreme it may be because the child's circumstances, experiences are extreme and/or the child's ability to make needs clear or interpret other people's intentions is impaired. Both norms and extremes of behaviour can be understood using a framework that applies knowledge of how behaviour develops to consider a child's needs and what might be appropriate expectations of that child.

Handbook of Parenting Masud S. Hogg, Nicholas Long, 2004-02-17 The Handbook of Parenting brings together in a single volume much of the theoretical and empirical knowledge and aspects of professional activity within the broadly defined field of parenting. Contributions are presented from an internationally renowned group of scholars known for their work in a range of disciplines including child and family psychology, education and family studies, providing an accessible map of the major debates in theory, research and practice in this important and exciting field. The material is presented comprehensively. It encompasses essential policy and professional issues in all the main areas of current concern from parenting in culturally divergent settings to parenting children with special needs, in areas of physical, mental, social and educational functioning to looking at ways in which the wider community and technological advances may be able to provide parenting support. Published in a single volume format, this handbook will prove an invaluable and essential resource. Academics, researchers, practitioners and advanced students in a host of disciplines will gain from its breadth, wealth of information and enormous insight into the principal issues related to parenting theory and practice in the 21st century. The distinctive contribution of this handbook is to present a vast body of research and other information in a manner that is usable by practitioners in a wide range of child and parental support activities.
