The Positive Case for Negative Campaigning Kyle Mattes, David P. Redlawsk, 2015-02-06 Turn on the television or sign in to social media during election season and chances are you ll see plenty of negative campaigning For decades conventional wisdom has held that Americans hate negativity in political advertising and some have even argued that its pervasiveness in recent seasons has helped to drive down voter turnout Arguing against this commonly held view Kyle Mattes and David P Redlawsk show not only that some negativity is accepted by voters as part of the political process but that negative advertising is necessary to convey valuable information that would not otherwise be revealed The most comprehensive treatment of negative campaigning to date The Positive Case for Negative Campaigning uses models surveys and experiments to show that much of the seeming dislike of negative campaigning can be explained by the way survey questions have been worded By failing to distinguish between baseless and credible attacks surveys fail to capture differences in voters receptivity Voters responses the authors argue vary greatly and can be better explained by the content and believability of the ads than by whether the ads are negative Mattes and Redlawsk continue on to establish how voters make use of negative information and why it is necessary Many voters are politically na ve and unlikely to make inferences about candidates positions or traits so the ability of candidates to go on the attack and focus explicitly on information that would not otherwise be available is crucial to voter education
