Last Vanities:

Last Vanities Fleur Jaeggy, 1998 A dementedly prim wife spies on her husband and is hammered to death by his paramour of the moment a seemingly kind maid who mothers a wealthy orphan sets the house on fire a retired couple are about to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary when the husband throws himself out the window or does his wife give him a little help Set in mundane repressed middle class environments these tales pivot on terrible slips off the leash The Dictator's Dictation Robert Boyers, 2005-10-26 In these elegant essays many of them originally written for The New Republic and Harper's Robert Boyers examines the role of the political imagination in shaping the works of such important contemporary writers as W G Sebald and Philip Roth Nadine Gordimer and Mario Vargas Llosa Natalia Ginzburg and Pat Barker J M Coetzee and John Updike V S Naipaul and Anita Desai Occasionally he finds that politics actually figures very little in works that only pretend to be interested in politics Elsewhere he discovers that certain writers are not equal to the political issues they take on or that their work is fatally compromised by complacency or wishful thinking In the main though Boyers writes as a lover of great literature who wishes to understand how the best writers do justice to their own political obsessions without suggesting that everything is reducible to politics Resisting the notion that novels can be effectively translated into ideas or positions he resists as well the notion that art and politics must be held apart lest works of fiction somehow be contaminated by their association with real life or public issues The essays offer a combination of close reading argument and assessment What Boyers asks is the relationship between form and substance in a work whose formal properties are particularly striking Is it reasonable to think of a particular writer as reactionary merely because he presents an unflattering portrait of revolutionary activists or because he is less than optimistic about the future of newly independent societies What is the status of private life in works set in politically tumultuous times Can the novelist be responsible if he consistently refuses to engage the conditions that affect even the intimate lives of his characters Such questions inform these essays which strive to be true to the essential spirit of the works they discuss and to interrogate as sympathetically as possible the imagination of writers who negotiate the unstable relationships between society and the individual art and ideas provoking addition to the collections of both literary enthusiasts and scholars alike The Selected Works of Honore de Balzac Honore de Balzac, Half way down the Rue Saint Denis almost at the corner of the Rue du Petit Lion there stood formerly one of those delightful houses which enable historians to reconstruct old Paris by analogy The threatening walls of this tumbledown abode seemed to have been decorated with hieroglyphics For what other name could the passer by give to the Xs and Vs which the horizontal or diagonal timbers traced on the front outlined by little parallel cracks in the plaster It was evident that every beam quivered in its mortices at the passing of the lightest vehicle This venerable structure was crowned by a triangular roof of which no example will ere long be seen in Paris This covering warped by the extremes of the Paris climate projected three feet over the roadway as much to protect the threshold from the rainfall as to shelter the wall of a loft and its sill less dormer window This upper story was built of planks overlapping each other like slates in order no doubt not to overweight the frail house One rainy morning in the month of March a young man carefully wrapped in his cloak stood under the awning of a shop opposite this old house which he was studying with the enthusiasm of an antiquary In point of fact this relic of the civic life of the sixteenth century offered more than one problem to the consideration of an observer Each story presented some singularity on the first floor four tall narrow windows close together were filled as to the lower panes with boards so as to produce the doubtful light by which a clever salesman can ascribe to his goods the color his customers inquire for The young man seemed very scornful of this part of the house his eyes had not yet rested on it The windows of the second floor where the Venetian blinds were drawn up revealing little dingy muslin curtains behind the large Bohemian glass panes did not interest him either His attention was attracted to the third floor to the modest sash frames of wood so clumsily wrought that they might have found a place in the Museum of Arts and Crafts to illustrate the early efforts of French carpentry These windows were glazed with small squares of glass so green that but for his good eyes the young man could not have seen the blue checked cotton curtains which screened the mysteries of the room from profane eyes Now and then the watcher weary of his fruitless contemplation or of the silence in which the house was buried like the whole neighborhood dropped his eyes towards the lower regions An involuntary smile parted his lips each time he looked at the shop where in fact there were some laughable details A formidable wooden beam resting on four pillars which appeared to have bent under the weight of the decrepit house had been encrusted with as many coats of different paint as there are of rouge on an old duchess cheek In the middle of this broad and fantastically carved joist there was an old painting representing a cat playing rackets This picture was what moved the young man to mirth But it must be said that the wittiest of modern painters could not invent so comical a caricature The animal held in one of its forepaws a racket as big as itself and stood on its hind legs to aim at hitting an enormous ball returned by a man in a fine embroidered coat Drawing color and accessories all were treated in such a way as to suggest that the artist had meant to make game of the shop owner and of the passing observer Time while impairing this artless painting had made it yet more grotesque by introducing some uncertain features which must have puzzled the conscientious idler For instance the cat s tail had been eaten into in such a way that it might now have been taken for the figure of a spectator so long and thick and furry were the tails of our forefathers cats To the right of the picture on an azure field which ill disguised the decay of the wood might be read the name Guillaume and to the left Successor to Master Chevreton Sun and rain had worn away most of the gilding parsimoniously applied to the letters of this superscription in which the Us and Vs had changed places in obedience to the laws of old world orthography To quench the pride of those who believe that the world is growing cleverer day by day and that modern humbug surpasses everything it may be observed that these signs of which the origin seems so whimsical to many Paris merchants are the dead pictures of once living pictures by which our roguish ancestors contrived to tempt customers into their houses Thus the Spinning Sow the Green Monkey and others were animals in cages whose skills astonished the passer by and whose accomplishments prove the patience of the fifteenth century artisan Such curiosities did more to enrich their fortunate owners than the signs of Providence Good faith Grace of God and Decapitation of John the Baptist which may still be seen in the Rue Saint Denis
