Estate Planning And Drafting:

Estate Planning and Drafting JEFFREY N. PENNELL, 2020-10-22 Updated through August 1 2020 the third edition of Pennell's Estate Planning and Drafting focuses on every day planning for middle rich clients For example Traditional planning for couples who may not have as much wealth as double the basic exclusion amount but who anticipate that the exclusion amount may decline in the future They must consider whether to qualify 100% of the estate of the first to die for the marital deduction and defer all taxes or instead to shelter the unified credit of the first to die in a nonmarital trust In either case they also need to decide whether to elect portability for any unused exclusion amount A sharper focus on family trust planning for clients with enough wealth to worry about protecting their beneficiaries and wealth but for whom sophisticated tax minimization techniques are not needed A new brief explanation of Code Chapter 14 illustrates its application but notes that most middle rich clients will not stumble into estate freezing techniques The coverage of retirement benefits is updated to reflect the SECURE Act changes to the required minimum distribution rules and elimination of most stretch payout planning The chapter on charitable giving is streamlined and simplified in recognition that most middle rich clients do not make extensive use of private foundations or split interest trusts Information about postmortem planning and fiduciary administration stresses state and federal income taxation and state death taxation in situations that do not trigger federal wealth transfer taxation The text explains essential tax fundamentals that inform traditional techniques e g Crummey powers without overemphasis on the tax oriented practices that led to their original adoption There are over 100 pages of annotated forms illustrating basic planning documents including a pour over will self trusteed declaration of trust irrevocable life insurance trust family and marital deduction trusts and a third party special needs trust Estate Planning and Drafting Regis W.
