Executive Leadership and Legislative Assemblies Nicholas D. J. Baldwin, 2014-01-02 The relationship between a head of government, head of the executive branch, and a nation's parliament or legislative assembly: the legislative branch has long been the focus for comment and analysis. For example, has the prime minister in the United Kingdom come to a position of dominance at the expense of the power of parliament? Does the American president stand head and shoulders above Congress? Is a French president master of the system? Need the Russian president pay attention to the Duma? What of the position in other parliamentary and presidential systems? In this book, Baldwin seeks to provide answers and does so by drawing upon the knowledge and expertise of an international group of scholars whose essays advance our knowledge of the subject. This book was previously published as a special issue of the Journal of Legislative Studies.

Executive Leadership Attributes Relating to Transformed Organizational Human Resource Services Kathleen K. Roth, 2004 This study explored the relationships between the transformational leadership attributes of Human Resource (HR) executives and the Internet-based transformed HR services they provide. In general, this research addressed the question: whether HR executives who are more transformational in leader style are more likely to be successful in transforming their respective HR services. Senior HR executives of Fortune 1000, Forbes 257, and other high performance organizations responded to an online survey regarding their relevant organizational roles, HR experience levels, Information Technology (IT) experience levels, education levels, and their involvement levels during their Internet-based system implementations. The primary data came from their assessments of the impact of their Internet-based HR information systems and also self-reports of their individual leadership style using the MLQ 5X instrument. A total of 58 senior HR executives responded to the survey, representing an overall 4.8% response rate from the 1,219 prospective executives. Participating senior HR executives represented public, private, and not-for-profit organizations in a variety of industries.
