Executive Leadership A Practical Guide To Managing Complexity Developmental Management:

Executive Leadership Elliott Jaques, Stephen D. Clement, 1994 Integral Ubuntu Leadership Passmore Musungwa Matupire, 2016-10-04 The four worlds as we know them today the North West South and East are out of balance The West and the North generally dominate on a global scale while the South and the East lag behind This also happens at individual societal and organisational levels It is clear that there is a need to change the way we lead our organisations in business and the way we think about leading in politics Here is a comprehensive exploration of the Integral Leadership challenges of the twenty first century The author combines the African philosophy of Ubuntu or humanness the cornerstone of African thought and life with the concept of Integral Leadership with particular reference to Lessem and Schieffer s combining in their 2010 book Integral Research and Innovation of nature and community culture and spirituality science and technology and politics and economies This connectedness in the new paradigm of wholeness and relatedness goes beyond the relationships of human beings alone and involves experiences with nature and community Leadership is viewed from an indigenous and exogenous perspective bringing together a newly Integral approach which will also introduce industry ecology and knowledge ecology as an evolution of the Ubuntu philosophy The author offers a unique forum through which to commit to paper the operationalisation of the Integral Ubuntu Leadership model in catalysing development efforts and in CARE ing for communities and societies The Capable Executive Moreen Anderson, Paul Dainty, 1996-03-11 Despite the impact senior managers can have on organisations surprisingly little is known about what makes them effective This distinctive book is structured around the findings of the authors eight year research programme into senior executive effectiveness In all eleven Capabilities have been identified which cover how executives cope personally with their role how they lead and influence others and build competitive organisations Each Capability is used as a starting point to review the latest management thinking and practice as it applies to senior executives ICMLG2014 Proceedings of the 2nd International Conference on Management, Leadership and Governance Philip Arthur Dover, Sam Hariharan, Michael G. Cummings, 2014-01-02 Management to Facilitate Compliance with Global Conventions During Hazardous and Toxic Waste Cleanup Projects in Asia Ron Laurence McDowall, 2006-01-28 The management of hazardous and toxic waste projects in Asia especially that related to intractable chemicals has had a less than acceptable performance profile during the last 20 years There have been numerous documented cases of management and systems failures in intractable chemical recovery projects despite the establishment of global conventions designed to avoid such problems A research programme was undertaken with the aim of producing a management model for companies to help prevent such failures in the future The research began in the field with an exploration of management culture and its impact on project management This involved multiple visits to five Asian countries and interviewing people involved in intractable waste management at both strategic and operational levels and reviewing project records Personnel in government departments particularly the competent authority were interviewed to gain insights into the applied management culture within the five countries studied. The various international conventions or regulations regarding hazardous waste and its management were researched for their interdependence and effectiveness. The research concentrated on the Management Plans or Environmental Management Systems that reside within these conventions in order to establish a benchmark of expectation concerning standards of management and organisation that would be required of a member state to discharge its obligations under the conventions. This work involved the author attending several meetings and conferences of the parties to the UNEP Basel Convention as well as attendance at many Technical Working Groups over several years. Complexity theory and uncertainty theory along with emergent theory and innovation adoption theory were researched. The outcome of this research clearly suggested that a multidimensional matrix based approach could be successful in providing companies with a strategic management model that if applied could enable them to manage large scale intractable projects effectively in compliance with the conventions. The hypothesis of this work is that Duncan's matrix model can be reverse applied to the external environmental elements and components combined with the mutual adaptation model i.e. technology organisational mutual adaptation therefore establishing an integrated multidimensional model of adaptation. The mutual adaptation approach was subsequently used to frame a series of questions that formed the basis of four field surveys. These surveys were applied at different times over a five year period covering ten projects in China and Taiwan and involving interviews with a total of 100 executives who were asked a total of 96 questions across the four surveys resulting in 9600 responses. The first two surveys were conducted close together in time with the third and fourth later in the process and thus could be considered retrospective. The respondents included project managers, engineers, technicians, company accountants, marketing managers and site leaders. The data collected validated the hypothesis and established that complexity management was an element of those companies that successfully adopted external technology and systems and in fact were also engaged in reversing the technology back to the originators. The data also indicated that those companies not engaging in complexity management were not reversing technology adoption. An integrated mutual adaptation model was developed from the characterisation matrices and consequently a two dimensional model of singularity. The final singularity model can be applied at an organisation's strategic level so as to provide an organisational capacity for compliance with environmentally sound management practices as demanded by the international hazardous waste conventions. Technical Report, 1997 Managing Sustainable Development Programmes Gran Brulin, Lennart Svensson, 2016-05-13. Project work driven by competent project leaders drives positive outcomes. Unfortunately these optimistic initial results are often short sighted with few evaluations of their long term impact. The research contained in Managing Sustainable Development Programmes reveals an extraordinary level of failure in the durability of large change programmes and projects in both the private and public sectors. In this book the authors question whether sustainable development be achieved within the framework of large publicly financed programmes.

This strong critique of traditional programme implementation overturns much of our current thinking about project delivery and governance. The authors focus instead on sustainable change and development. They show how active ownership and collaboration between different actors and the dynamics of developmental learning can be used to create programmes and projects that contribute to innovation, employment and growth in a way that favours companies, employees, customers and society in a broader sense. The message at its heart is don't blame the project leader but rather look for dynamic possession of projects, joint knowledge management and sharing with external stakeholders that will secure long term effects.

Embracing Complexity Jean G. Boulton, Peter Murray Allen, Cliff Bowman, 2015. The book describes what it means to say the world is complex and explores what that means for managers, policy makers and individuals. The first part of the book is about the theory and ideas of complexity. This is explained in a way that is thorough but not mathematical. It compares differing approaches and also provides a historical perspective showing how such thinking has been around since the beginning of civilisation. It emphasises the difference between a complexity worldview and the dominant mechanical worldview that underpins much of current management practice. It defines the complexity worldview as recognising the world is interconnected, shaped by history and the particularities of context. The comparison of the differing approaches to modelling complexity is unique in its depth and accessibility. The second part of the book uses this lens of complexity to explore issues in the fields of management, strategy, economics and international development. It also explores how to facilitate others to recognise the implications of adopting a complex rather than a mechanical worldview and suggests methods of research to explore systemic, path dependent, emergent aspects of situations. The authors of this book span both science and management, academia and practice, thus the explanations of science are authoritative and yet the examples of changing how you live and work in the world are real and accessible. The aim of the book is to bring alive what complexity is all about and to illustrate the importance of loosening the grip of a modernist worldview with its hope for prediction, certainty and control.
