Touch and Intimacy in First World War Literature Santanu Das, 2006-04-06 The First World War ravaged the male body on an unprecedented scale yet fostered moments of physical intimacy and tenderness among the soldiers in the trenches Touch the most elusive and private of the senses became central to war experience War writing is haunted by experiences of physical contact from the muddy realities of the front to the emotional intensity of trench life to the traumatic obsession with the wounded body in nurses memoirs Through extensive archival and historical research analysing previously unknown letters and diaries alongside literary writings by figures such as Owen and Brittain Santanu Das recovers the sensuous world of the First World War trenches and hospitals This original and evocative study alters our understanding of the period as well as of the body at war and illuminates the perilous intimacy between sense experience emotion and language as we try to make meaning in times of crisis The Facts on File Companion to the World Novel Michael Sollars, Arbolina Llamas Jennings, 2008 Other-person-ness and the Person with Profound Disabilities Pia

Matthews, 2022-10-13 Many people think that profound disability presents us with a real problem often because it seems difficult to connect with someone who does not seem to think or act like us Positioning profound disability in this way immediately sets up a them and us where the person with profound disability becomes the problematic other Attempts to bridge the them and us risk reducing everyone to the same where disability is not taken seriously In contrast to a them and us and negative connotations of the other found in the existentialist philosophies of writers like Sartre and Beauvoir Pia Matthews argues for a return to a positive view of the other One positive approach to the other based on an ethics of relationship as championed by Levinas seems to mitigate the otherness of profound disability However this still makes the person with profound disability dependent on the ethical concern of the more powerful other Instead this book argues for return to a personalist philosophy of being offered by Mounier Marcel and Wojtya and deepened by participation belonging and the possibility of contributing to the good of all This deepened philosophy of being gives a more solid foundation for people who are especially at the mercy of others It will be of interest to all scholars and students of disability studies philosophy and anthropology
