Advances in Evidence-Based Policing Johannes Knutsson, Lisa Tompson, 2017-04-21 The evidence based policing EBP movement has intensified in many countries around the world in recent years resulting in a proliferation of policies and infrastructure to support such a transformation This movement has come to be associated with particular methods of evaluation and systematic review which have been drawn from what is assumed to prevail in medicine Given the credibility EBP is currently enjoying with both practitioners and government it is timely to subject its underpinning logic to thoughtful scrutiny This involves deliberating upon the meaning of evidence and what different models of knowledge accumulation and research methods have to offer in realising the aims of EBP The communication and presentation of evidence to practitioner audiences is another important aspect of EBP as are collaborative efforts to co produce new knowledge on police practice This is the first book that takes a kaleidoscopic approach to depict what EBP presently is and how it could develop The chapters individually and collectively challenge the underlying logic to the mainstream EBP position and the book concludes with an agenda for a more inclusive conceptualisation of evidence and EBP for the future It is aimed at students and academics who are interested in being part of this movement as well as policymakers and practitioners interested in integrating EBP principles into their practices

Targeting Domestic Abuse with Police Data Matthew P. Bland, Barak Ariel, 2020-09-29 This book explores the potential of domestic abuse data to assess the level of harm caused to victims and the amount of resources required to respond to it Policing domestic abuse has become a major activity for the police service in England and Wales Part of the police strategy is to gather hundreds of thousands of detailed records about victims and suspects the single largest set of domestic abuse records available but one that to date has largely unexplored by researchers In this volume Matthew Bland and Barak Ariel analyse three substantial datasets taken from police forces across the country and ask Can police data be used to derive meaningful insight How should we use these data to measure harm Just how much domestic abuse involves a repeat victim Does abuse get more serious over time Can serious domestic abuse be predicted before it occurs This volume illustrates the scale of the challenge the police and other agencies face with reducing domestic abuse A small proportion of individuals generate a majority of harm this book argues that police records offer opportunities to identify these individuals before the harm occurs

Demonstrating that statistical techniques can be used to profile domestic abuse to target harm reduction strategies more precisely and even identify a sizable proportion of serious cases before they occur this volume will be of interest to law enforcement officials policing researchers and policy makers interested in reducing the phenomenon of domestic abuse

Eck, 2017-11-22 Unraveling the Crime Place Connection examines in a new light how places enhance our understanding of crime and its control While there has been much work in this area focused on policy few have examined the underlying theories that inform this work Theory has played a secondary role in the criminology of place and this volume brings it to the forefront of scholarly concerns Each part and its chapters illuminate cutting edge ideas in the etiology and control of crime at place beginning with an introductory Part I Crime is often concentrated in very small geographies and Part II emphasizes the importance of capturing the dynamic nature of places in order to understand crime clustering Part III offers integrative theories on the varying contextual arrangements of places and links theories of places to other theories of individuals neighborhoods and other social contexts In Part IV theorists ask how the actions of place owners facilitate or control crime and what policies governments can institute to regulate place management This volume will be of interest to criminologists worldwide and useful for graduate level or advanced undergraduate courses on environmental criminology or crime prevention
