where the personal first became the political where the nation's first enduring gay rights movement emerged and where the broad spectrum of what we now think of as identity politics was born Portraying life over a period of more than forty years in the hilly enclave of Edendale near downtown Los Angeles Daniel Hurewitz considers the work of painters and printmakers looks inside the Communist Party's intimate cultural scene and examines the social world of gay men In this vividly written narrative he discovers why and how these communities inspiring both one another and the city as a whole transformed American notions of political identity with their ideas about self expression political engagement and race relations Bohemian Los Angeles incorporating fascinating oral histories personal letters police records and rare photographs shifts our focus from gay and bohemian New York to the west coast with significant implications for twentieth century U S history and politics Federal Aging Programs Oversight United States. The Borders Within Douglas Monroy,2022-07-19 Throughout its history the nation that is now called the United States has been inextricably entwined with the nation now called Mexico Indeed their indigenous peoples interacted long before borders of any kind were established Today though the border between the two nations is so prominent that it is front page news in both countries Douglas Monroy a noted Mexican American historian has for many years pondered the historical and cultural intertwinings of the two nations Here in beautifully crafted essays he reflects on some of the many ways in which the citizens of the two countries have misunderstood each other Putting himself and his own quest for understanding directly into his work he contemplates the missions of California the differences between liberal and traditional societies the meanings of words like Mexican Chicano and Latino and even the significance of avocados and bathing suits In thought provoking chapters he considers why Native Americans didn't embrace Catholicism why NAFTA isn't working the way it was supposed to and why Mexicans and their neighbors to the north tell themselves different versions of the same historical events In his own thoughtful way Monroy is an explorer Rather than trying to conquer new lands however his goal is to gain new insights He wants to comprehend two cultures that are bound to each other without fully recognizing their bonds Along with Monroy readers will discover that borders when we stop and really think about it are drawn more deeply in our minds than on any maps

Poverty Rebels Casey D. Nichols, 2025-03-25 In 1960s Los Angeles a powerful network within Black and Chicano organizations transformed the War on Poverty and Model Cities program Black and Brown activists worked together and separately to use the US federal government's War on Poverty as an opportunity to establish programs that would counteract the neglect that led to underfunded schools inadequate housing and a lack of community institutions Casey Nichols examines this diverse group of intentional and unintentional collaborators she calls poverty rebels which included politicians activists youth professionals community members and local people Poverty rebels leveraged federal antipoverty funding to work around the limited capacity of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 to address the dual impact of race and class in African American and Mexican American communities They understood that unequal policy had created their urban realities and sought to redefine antipoverty legislation in a way that improved their material lives Drawing on a wide range of sources including local and federal government documents oral histories and organizational records Nichols examines vital links between the nation's social and political spheres Ultimately she argues that Black Brown relations gained greater national significance during the mid 1960s amid important civil rights victories and social policies to address so called disadvantaged communities By coming into social and political proximity African Americans and Mexican Americans constructed a national dialogue about Black Brown relations that had shared benefits and that continues to shape policy debates today Alien Neighbors, Foreign Friends Charlotte Brooks,2009-08-01 Between the early 1900s and the late 1950s the attitudes of white Californians toward their Asian American neighbors evolved from outright hostility to relative acceptance Charlotte Brooks examines this transformation through the lens of California s urban housing markets arguing that the perceived foreignness of Asian Americans which initially stranded them in segregated areas eventually facilitated their integration into neighborhoods that rejected other minorities Against the backdrop of cold war efforts to win Asian hearts and minds whites who saw little difference between Asians and Asian Americans increasingly advocated the latter group s access to middle class life and the residential areas that went with it But as they transformed Asian Americans into a model minority whites purposefully ignored the long backstory of Chinese and Japanese Americans early and largely failed attempts to participate in public and private housing programs As Brooks tells this multifaceted story she draws on a broad range of sources in multiple languages giving voice to an array of community leaders journalists activists and homeowners and insightfully conveying the complexity of racialized housing in a multiracial society South Central Is Home Abigail Rosas,2019-07-23 South Central Los Angeles is often characterized as an African American community beset by poverty and economic neglect But this depiction obscures the significant Latina o population that has called South Central home since the 1970s More significantly it conceals the efforts African American and Latina o residents have made together in shaping their community As residents have faced increasing challenges from diminished government social services economic disinvestment immigration enforcement and police surveillance they have come together in their struggle for belonging and justice South Central Is Home investigates the development of relational community formation and highlights how communities of color like South Central experience racism and discrimination and how in the best of situations they are energized to improve their conditions together Tracking the demographic shifts in South Central from 1945 to the present Abigail Rosas shows how financial institutions War on Poverty programs like Headstart for school children and community health centers emerged as crucial sites where neighbors engaged one another over what was best for their community Through this work Rosas illuminates the promise of community building offering findings indispensable to our understandings of race community and place in U S society
