methods employed in research and development projects the paper argues for greater precision in key concepts of gender research starting with sex and gender From the many possible qualitative methods used in development work the paper focuses on several common observational both direct and participatory and interview techniques the latter including key informant and group interviews and focus group discussions Researchers use various techniques to gather different types of information for example mapping techniques to understand men s and women s different types of knowledge about their environment and eliciting in depth information on a single topic with key informants In a brief discussion of the analysis of qualitative data the paper notes that informant responses are not the truth but need to be assessed against other sources of data Finally there is a short discussion of how qualitative data have been used in comparative work The paper concludes that the results of good qualitative research on gender relations can help identify the locally specific pathways needed to achieve gender transformative development approaches
