Implementing EU Environmental Policy Christoph Knill, Andrea Lenschow, 2000 This book examines issues of censorship, publicity, and teenage fandom in 1950s Britain surrounding a series of controversial Hollywood films: The Wild One, Blackboard Jungle, Rebel Without a Cause, Rock Around the Clock, and Jailhouse Rock. It also explores British cinema's commentary on juvenile delinquency through a re-examination of such British films as The Blue Lamp, Spare the Rod, and Serious Charge. Taking a multi-dimensional approach, the book intersects with star studies and social history while reappraising the stardom of Marlon Brando, James Dean, and Elvis Presley. By looking at the specific meanings, pleasures, and uses British fans derived from these films, it provides a logical and sustained narrative for how Hollywood star images fed into and disrupted British cultural life during a period of unprecedented teenage consumerism.

Implementing European Environmental Policy Matthieu Glachant, 2001-12-21 This significant book investigates the political economy of environmental policy in Europe with a careful analysis of how EU directives are realised in the member states. The authors explore this issue through a comparative evaluation of the implementation of three pieces of EU environmental legislation in France, Germany, the Netherlands, and the UK. Areas covered by the legislation include air emission standards for waste incinerators, the electricity supply industry, and the certification of environmental management systems. The results vary across cases, even though overcompliance is observed in certain cases. The regularity arising from the different case studies is related to the determinants of the environmental outcomes that are observed. When environmental directives are implemented, they are likely to interact with parallel policy processes, and these interactions can exert a strong positive or negative influence on the success of the policy in question. The central policy problem is the fact that these interactions are very difficult to anticipate at the policy formulation stage. It leads the authors to propose that effective environmental policy should therefore be adaptable in order to cope with these unanticipated effects.

Implementation Monitoring and Process Evaluation Ruth P. Saunders, 2015-04-01 This practical guide helps readers understand and use the steps that program planners and evaluators take in implementing and monitoring a new program, policy, or practice in an organizational setting. The book covers the entire process from planning to carrying out the plan and summarizing, reporting, and using the results. A wide range of real-world examples in the book are drawn from health education non profit organizations and public administration and an extended case study Your Turn boxes and worksheet templates help readers apply concepts to their own projects Ideal for practitioners researchers and students this book can be used as a primary text for a process evaluation or an implementation monitoring course or as a supplemental text in a broader program evaluation course

The Use of Economic Instruments in Nordic Environmental Policy 1999-2001, 2002

New Perspectives on Agri-environmental Policies Stephan J Goetz, Floor Brouwer, 2009-10-20 Significant advances have occurred in recent years in Europe and in North America in addressing agri environmental policies Land use issues tend to be more pressing in Europe than in the US as a whole because of different spatial exigencies Because these advances have taken place within individual academic disciplines there has been something of a loss of synergy and often efforts are duplicated While important institutional and legal differences still exist between the two continents the sharing of recent scientific advances will benefit scientists on both sides of the Atlantic and this is the main purpose of this book The authors aim to identify options for policy to overcome the challenges ahead synthesize existing knowledge and identify gaps in current knowledge This is aided by the adoption of a properly comparative approach

Environmental Challenges and Governance Sacchidananda Mukherjee, Debashis Chakraborty, 2015-03-02 The economies located in East South and Southeast Asia have witnessed an interesting growth sustainability trade off over the last decades While growth considerations have paved ways for deepened ties with growing trade investment waves and increasing population pressure necessitated exploitation of hitherto unutilized natural resources focus on environmental sustainability has been a recent consideration The growth impetus still playing a key role in these economies it becomes imperative that the countries effectively address the key sustainability concerns e g air and water pollution land degradation loss of biodiversity climate change issues like CO2 emissions etc But how prepared is the governance mechanism of these countries covering not only the legislative and administrative framework but also involvement of the judiciary presence of spirited civil society and active engagement of stakeholders in policy framing dialogues to rise up to these challenges The book seeks an answer to this question through the environmental governance mechanism and natural resource conservation policies in three vibrant regions within Asia A holistic development dimension of sustainable development path emerges through discussion of policies adopted by developed Japan South Korea upper middle China Malaysia developing India Indonesia Philippines Sri Lanka Thailand and least developed countries Bangladesh Myanmar Nepal

International Support for Domestic Climate Policies in Developing Countries Karstan Neuhoff, 2015-02-13 This volume examines how international cooperation can support implementation of domestic climate policies in developing countries Six case studies explore the domestic drivers and barriers for policies with climate co benefits in developing countries and show that international support can help to overcome these constraints by providing additional resources for incremental policy costs technical assistance and technology cooperation to build local capacity Cooperation can also contribute to robust institutional frameworks and government policies that facilitate increased private sector investment which supports low carbon production and consumption Any such cooperation has to be anchored in domestic initiatives building on stakeholder support for policies with climate co benefits The studies also examines the important role played by policy indicators in successful policy implementation and how they can be linked to international incentive schemes The contributions in this volume examine cases from institutional and national perspectives from across the globe and find that with common but differentiated responsibility for climate policy developed countries have to contribute more towards technological and financial support in developing countries The National Environmental Policy Act ,1997
