Engines of Influence is a fifty year history of Victoria s country newspapers beginning with James Harrison s Geelong Advertiser in 1840 and ending in December 1890 when 166 papers were being published in 122 country towns This significant book identifies all press sites and newspapers of the era whether long lasting or short lived and highlights the major part played by them in helping construct the machinery of government lay the foundations of party politics and foster a sense of rural Victorian identity The country press was an important agent of political change leading up to events such as the separation of the Port Phillip District from New South Wales in 1851 and the federation of the colony of Victoria with other British dependencies into a single nation at the end of the nineteenth century Engines of Influence shows how country newspapers also exercised cultural authority circulating ideas generated both within local communities and from the wider world Towards the end of the fifty years examined this rural press was becoming a close part of a unified political state linked through the metropolitan press and agencies to a technologically based global communications network To Feed

A Nation Keith Farrer,2005-02-24 To Feed a Nation takes the reader on a journey over the centuries describing the slow and arduous development of Australian food technology and science from before European settlement to the latter half of the twentieth century The first part of the book gives a fascinating glimpse into Aboriginal food and culture outlines the primitive state of European food technology at the time of the First Fleet and shows how the colonists tried to transfer to Australia the village technologies they knew in England The second part describes how for most of the nineteenth century technology preceded science the processing and storage of food relied on methods which by trial and error had been shown to work and food science was slow to emerge The final part of the book highlights the twentieth century watershed how a growing understanding of the nature of food the principles of nutrition and the role of micro organisms was able to propel food technology to where it is today The publication of To Feed a Nation has been sponsored by the Food Technology Association of Victoria Disreputable Profession Denis Cryle,1997 History of Artificial Cold, Scientific, Technological and
