Emotions and Moods Michael Lewis,2012-12-06 No one would deny the proposition that in order to understand human behavior and development one must understand feelings The interest in emotions is enduring Yet within the discipline of psychology the study of feelings and emotions has been somewhat less than respectable a stepchild to the fields of cognitive science and psycholinguistics Perusal of the language acquisition literature reveals a greater concern among psychologists for the acquisition of prepositions than for terms that convey feelings Without question issues related to emotion its development and its measurement have been neglected in the research literature until quite recently From a developmental perspective Piaget and his followers have articulated a complex theory of transition and change in intellectual behavior

Nearly a century ago Freud proposed an elaborate theory of personality development in which some aspects of emotional growth were considered. We await the construction of a comprehensive theory of emotional development. Recognizing such a need we set out over a decade ago to solve what seemed to be a relatively simple problem. By observing young children could one successfully classify children in terms of individual differences on emotional dimensions such as happiness, fear, and anger? The task appeared easy. One could send graduate students into a preschool and ask them to observe children for several days after which they would rank the children in terms of differences on various emotional dimensions.

Self-Control and Self-Modification of Emotional Behavior Kirk R. Blankstein, Janet Polivy, 2012-12-06 Measuring Emotions in Infants and Children Carroll Ellis Izard, Peter B. Read, 1982 Volume 1 brings together a strong group of researchers who have pioneered a wide variety of empirical approaches to the difficult problems of conceptualising and assessing emotion in infants and children. The volume will be an invaluable resource for all those who study infants and children. Volume 2 complements the first volume which gave new impetus to research on social and affective development adapted from vendor website How NCLB Affects Students with Disabilities United States. Congress. House. Committee on Education and Labor. Subcommittee on Early Childhood, Elementary, and Secondary Education, 2007 Emotion Regulation Pamela M. Cole, Tom Hollenstein, 2018-06-12 One of the most important advances in the study of emotion regulation is understanding it as a dynamic process that develops across the life span. Emotion Regulation focuses on current conceptual and methodological issues in terms of change over various time scales: developmental change across years as well as changes from day to day, from situation to situation, and from moment to moment. Written by top experts in the field, the volume is organized around three age periods of the life span: infancy and childhood, adolescence, and adulthood. By taking the matter of time seriously, these chapters represent promising and necessary approaches to broadening our knowledge of emotion regulation as a dynamic process that changes with age. The volume provides guidance for future research that will enable researchers to leave behind facile and static conceptualizations of emotion regulation in favor of richer and more explanatory frameworks The Feeling Body Giovanna Colombetti, 2017-06-30 A proposal that extends the enactive approach developed in cognitive science and philosophy of mind to issues in affective science. In The Feeling Body Giovanna Colombetti takes ideas from the enactive approach developed over the last twenty years in cognitive science and philosophy of mind and applies them for the first time to affective science: the study of emotions, moods, and feelings. She argues that enactivism entails a view of cognition as not just embodied but also intrinsically affective, and she elaborates on the implications of this claim for the study of emotion in psychology and neuroscience. In the course of her discussion, Colombetti focuses on long debated issues in affective science including the notion of basic emotions, the nature of appraisal and its relationship to bodily arousal, the place of bodily feelings in emotion experience, the neurophysiological study of emotion experience, and the bodily nature of our encounters with others. Drawing on enactivist tools such as dynamical systems theory

the notion of the lived body neurophenomenology and phenomenological accounts of empathy Colombetti advances a novel approach to these traditional issues that does justice to their complexity Doing so she also expands the enactive approach into a further domain of inquiry one that has more generally been neglected by the embodied embedded approach in the philosophy of cognitive science
