and new retailing technologies to internet shopping has dramatically altered not only how we buy but what we buy and why. In an era of cheap is chic, wealthy shoppers haggle to win even the smallest discounts. Gray consumers buy more rap and techno music than anyone else and are the fastest growing group of internet users and the Web and the power of micro marketing have revolutionized forever the means of wooing new customers. New Consumers are taking over the world and redefining the very meaning of consumerism and the marketplace. As likely to be affluent over fifties as ambitious under thirties, New Consumers defy traditional marketing concepts and segmentation by age, gender, or income. In pursuit of the authentic experience, New Consumers come together in their defining drive for all things real in everything from food to fashion, foreign holidays to furniture, technology to spirituality. Their attention and interest have shifted from commodity to authenticity. In an affluent world now saturated with affordable products, there are three new scarcities: time, attention, and trust. This major book shows how these can be won by giving the soul control rather than putting customers on the customer is king pedestal. Over the past decade, Lewis and Bridger have been at the forefront of researching the New Consumers, studying their lifestyles, observing behavior, and watching the steady rise in their numbers, influence, and economic power. Here for the first time and with examples from Starbucks to Dyson, they report the results of their work, including Amex's use of computer technology to create intimate portraits of individuals, what the authors call tastepace. Regardless of product or service for companies large and small, The Soul of the New Consumer gathers research from marketing, psychology, social trends, and economics to present the first ever profile of the independent, individualistic, involved, and well-informed consumers who are challenging the way marketing, selling, and business are done.
