Bad Land Pastoralism in Great Plains Fiction Matthew J. C. Cella, 2010-04-15 At the core of this nuanced book is the question that ecocritics have been debating for decades what is the relationship between aesthetics and activism between art and community By using a pastoral lens to examine ten fictional narratives that chronicle the dialogue between human culture and nonhuman nature on the Great Plains Matthew Cella explores literary treatments of a succession of abrupt cultural transitions from the Euroamerican conquest of the Indian wilderness in the nineteenth century to the Buffalo Commons phenomenon in the twentieth By charting the shifting meaning of land use and biocultural change in the region he posits this bad land the arid West as a crucible for the development of the human imagination Each chapter deals closely with two novels that chronicle the same crisis within the Plains community Cella highlights for example how Willa Cather reconciles her persistent romanticism with a growing disillusionment about the future of rural Nebraska how Tillie Olsen and Frederick Manfred approach the tragedy of the Dust Bowl with strikingly similar visions and how Annie Proulx and Thomas King use the return of the buffalo as the centerpiece of a revised mythology of the Plains as a palimpsest defined by layers of change and response By illuminating these fictional quests for wholeness on the Great Plains Cella leads us to understand the intricate interdependency of people and the places they inhabit Cella uses the term pastoralism in its broadest sense to mean a mode of thinking that probes the relationship between nature and culture a discourse concerned with human engagement material and nonmaterial with the nonhuman community In all ten novels discussed in this book pastoral experience the encounter with the Beautiful leads to a renewed understanding of the integral connection between human and nonhuman communities Propelling this tradition of bad land pastoralism are an underlying faith in the beauty of wholeness that comes from inhabiting a continuously changing biocultural landscape and a recognition of the inevitability of change The power of story and language to shape the direction of that change gives literary pastoralism the potential to support an alternative series of ideals based not on escape but on stewardship community continuity and commitment

The Appropriation of Native American

Spirituality Suzanne Owen, 2011-10-20 Native Americans and Canadians are largely romanticised or sidelined figures in modern society Their spirituality has been appropriated on a relatively large scale by Europeans and non Native Americans with little concern for the diversity of Native American opinions Suzanne Owen offers an insight into appropriation that will bring a new understanding and perspective to these debates This important volume collects together these key debates from the last 25 years and sets them in context analyses Native American objections to appropriations of their spirituality and examines New Age practices based on Native American spirituality The Appropriation of Native American Spirituality includes the findings of fieldwork among the Mi Kmaq of Newfoundland on the sharing of ceremonies between Native Americans and First Nations which highlights an aspect of the debate that has been under researched in both anthropology and religious studies that Native American discourses about the breaking of protocols rules on the participation and performance of ceremonies is at the heart of objections to the appropriation of Native American spirituality

Masculinities in Literature of the American West Lydia R. Cooper, 2016-11-15 The Western genre provides the most widely recognized iconic images of masculinity in the United States gun slinging laconic white male heroes who emphasize individualism violence and an idiosyncratic form of justice This idealized masculinity has been fused with ideas of national identity and character Masculinities in Literature of the American West examines how contemporary literary Westerns push back against the coded image of the Western hero exposing pervasive anxieties about what it means to act like a man Contemporary Westerns critique assumptions about innate connections between power masculinity and American character that influence public rhetoric even in the late 20th and early 21st centuries These novels struggle with the monumental challenge of all Westerns the challenge of being human in a place where being a man is so strictly coded so unachievable so complicit in atrocity and so desirable that it is worth dying for or perhaps worth nothing at all

Contemporary Native Fiction

James Donahue, 2019-02-21 Contemporary Native Fiction: Toward a Narrative Poetics of Survivance analyzes paradigmatic works of contemporary Native American First Nations literary fiction using the tools of narrative theory. Each chapter is read through the lens of a narrative theory: structuralist narratology, feminist narratology, rhetorical narratology, and unnatural narratology, in order to demonstrate how the formal structure of these narratives engages the political issues raised in the text. Additionally, each chapter shows how the inclusion of Native American First Nations authored narratives productively advances the theoretical work project of those narrative theories. This book offers a broad survey of possible means by which narrative theory and critical race theories can productively work together and is key reading for students and researchers working in this area.

Other Destinies Louis Owens, 1994 This first book-length critical analysis of the full range of novels written between 1854 and today by American Indian authors takes as its theme the search for self-discovery and cultural recovery. In his introduction, Louis Owens places the novels in context by considering their relationships to traditional American Indian oral literature as well as their differences from mainstream Euroamerican literature. In the following chapters, he looks at the novels of John Rollin Ridge, Mourning Dove, John Joseph Mathews, D. Arcy McNickle, N. Scott Momaday, James Welch, Leslie Marmon Silko, Louise Erdrich, Michael Dorris, and Gerald Vizenor. These authors are mixed-bloods who, in their writing, try to come to terms with the marginalization both of mixed-bloods and full-bloods and of their cultures in American society. Their novels are complex and sophisticated narratives of cultural survival and survival guides for full-bloods and mixed-bloods in modern America. Rejecting the stereotypes and clichés long attached to the word Indian, they appropriate and adapt the colonizers' language, English, to describe the Indian experience. These novels embody the American Indian point of view; the non-Indian is required to assume the role of other. In his analysis, Owens draws on a broad range of literary theory: myth and folklore, structuralism, modernism, poststructuralism, and particularly postmodernism. At the same time, he argues that although recent American Indian fiction incorporates a number of significant elements often identified with postmodern writing, it contradicts the primary impulse of postmodernism. That is, instead of celebrating fragmentation, ephemerality, and chaos, these authors insist upon a cultural center that is intact and recoverable upon immutable values and ecological truths. Other Destinies provides a new critical approach to novels by American Indians. It also offers a comprehensive introduction to the novels, helping teachers bring this important fiction to the classroom.

What are They Saying about Environmental Theology? John Hart, 2004 This book offers a comprehensive analysis of Catholic teachings on environmental themes by exploring official statements from Rome and the bishops of the Americas as well as from contemporary visionary theologians.
