The Pursuit of Pleasure Jane Rendell, 2002 The Pursuit of Pleasure presents the figures of the Rambler and the Cyprian the Eighteenth Century precursors to the Parisian flaneur and prostitute The urban spaces traced by these figures were the clubs sporting venues operas assembly rooms streets and arcades of central London Drawing on critical theory geography and philosophy The Pursuit of Pleasure extends and critiques the discipline of architectural history from a feminist perspective The gendering of public space is considered to be a complex and shifting series of moves and looks between men and women constructed and represented through spatial and social relations of consumption display and exchange Book cover Gender Studies in Architecture Dörte Kuhlmann, 2014-04-11 Analyzing a range of ideas from biological evolutionary and anthropological theories to a variety of feminist psychoanalytic poststructuralist and constructivist discourses this book provides a comprehensive introduction to the problematics of gender and power in architectural and urban design Topics range from conceptions of postulated matriarchal architecture in Old Europe to contemporary technologies of control from the mechanisms of gaze to architectural performatives from the under representation of women in the planning profession to the integration of gender issues to the curriculum The particular strengths of the book lie in its inclusiveness and critical analysis It is not a partisan defence of feminism or any other theory but a critical introduction to the issues relating to gender Moreover the conclusions reach beyond a narrow gender studies perspective to social and ethical considerations that are unavoidable in any responsible architectural or urbanistic practice With its broad range and balanced analysis of different theories the book is suitable as an overview of gender studies in architecture and useful for any designer who is concerned with the social effects of the built environment Architecture and the Politics of Gender in Early Modern Europe Helen Hills, 2018-05-08 Written by leading scholars in the field the essays in this book address the relationships between gender and the built environment specifically architecture in early modern Europe In recent years scholars have begun to investigate the ways in which architecture plays a part in the construction of gendered identities So far the debates have focused on the built environment of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries to the neglect of the early modern period This book focuses on early modern Europe a period decisive for our understanding of gender and sexuality Much excellent scholarship has enhanced our understanding of gender division in early modern Europe but often this scholarship considers gender in isolation from other vital factors especially social class Central to the concerns of this book therefore is a consideration of the intersections of gender with social rank Architecture and the Politics of Gender in Early Modern Europe makes a major contribution to the developing analysis of how architecture contributes to the shaping of social relations especially in relation to gender in early modern Europe

Exploring Gender in Vernacular Architecture Jessica Ellen Sewell, 2025-02-03 In Exploring Gender in Vernacular Architecture Jessica Ellen Sewell considers the gender of those who create and shape spaces how gender ideology contributes to and manifests itself in built form and what research methods make the observation of gendered experience possible She discusses single gender mixed gender and queer spaces providing a comprehensive look at how gender influences the design and construction of those spaces how those spaces are used and the relationship between gender and the broader architectural landscape In her study Sewell also provides an expansive view of how gender intersects with other categories of power and difference such as race class and age and how this intersectionality contributes to the design and use of built spaces In addition to examining the spaces themselves Sewell explores research methods for studying gendered experiences in architecture She argues that traditional research methods in vernacular architecture studies which often focus on building based fieldwork should be complemented by other methods such as letters oral histories and diaries that expand the understanding of buildings beyond their construction date and reveal how those buildings have been used and represented over time Digging into primary records Sewell posits can help challenge our assumptions about who influences architecture and urban development illuminating the roles of women and others in the building and shaping of space Thoroughly researched yet accessible for scholars new to the study of vernacular architecture Exploring Gender in Vernacular Architecture bridges the gap between specialized scholarship and broader public understanding Students of architectural history gender studies and cultural history will find it a valuable resource not only for examining the relationship between gender and architecture but for engaging new methodological tools that may further their own research

Friend,2008 Abstract Since gender is a cultural construct this project will revisit the Chicago Tribune Tower Competition 1922 and 1980 to explore how the contemporary notion of male and female are incorporated in American Architecture Gender and architecture will be studied to create a dialogue to define architecture that identifies itself as being sexy Sexy is a contemporary design term that depicts a project as being sensual cool erotic flashy or seductive Used literally it means to arouse or excite the senses While each description gives a general understanding of the term both fail in providing a definite or insightful description As modern designers we must analyze the term sexy by peeling off its cloak to understand its possible implication for architecture To do so one must begin by addressing the concept of gender The construction of gender in our society has been commonly viewed as polar opposites males at one end of the spectrum while females fall at the other end This theory was based on primarily biological factors that science and nature determined for society However in today s society this is not the case Social cultural physical psychological and emotional factors are more of a determinant of gender then just the biological factors once thought supreme As a society that strives for equality amongst its constituents there remains sentiment against homosexuality same sex marriage transgender and cross dressing Multiple constructs of gender identity serves to blur conventional boundaries between social groups and individuals Attempts to form a wholistic society characterized by equity equality tolerance and mutual respect requires a deep understanding of our urban icons To investigate this topic the project will examine two popular gendered magazines Cosmopolitan and Sports Illustrated for their gender constraints and the symbols and spaces that accommodate them The architect must have an understanding of the site in which the architecture is located The urban fabric of the Chicago Loop and other icons of Chicago comprise some of the most dynamic series of networks As architects

we are socially and culturally responsible for how these networks connect with the built form Once the networks are developed the architect has the ability to rethink the spatial arrangements that is generate a new understanding of these networks or present a new idea of the city This allows the design to be developed from the inside out This ideology of the networking will juxtapose with that of the imagery of a skyscraper The two will start to form the dialogue necessary to relate gender architecture and the urban condition The project will call for a new skyscraper s for the Chicago Tribune Tower Competition

'Designing Women' Annmarie Adams,Peta Tancred,2000-05-18 Historically the contributions of women architects to their profession have been minimized or overlooked Designing Women explores the tension that has existed between the architectural profession and its women members It demonstrates the influence that these women have had on architecture in Canada and links their so called marginalization to the profession s restrictive and sometimes discriminatory practices Co written by an architectural historian and a sociologist this book provides a welcome blend of disciplinary approaches The product of much original research it looks at issues that are specific to architecture in Canada and at the same time characteristic of many male dominated workplaces Annmarie Adams and Peta Tancred examine the issue of gender and its relation to the larger dynamics of status and power They argue that many women architects have reacted with ingenuity to the difficulties they have faced making major innovations in practice and design Branching out into a wide range of alternative fields these women have extended and developed what are considered to be the core specializations within architecture As the authors point out while the profession designs women s place within it women design buildings and careers that transcend that narrow professional definition

Architecture Depends Jeremy Till,2013-02-08 Polemics and reflections on how to bridge the gap between what architecture actually is and what architects want it to be Architecture depends on what On people time politics ethics mess the real world Architecture Jeremy Till argues with conviction in this engaging sometimes pugnacious book cannot help itself it is dependent for its very existence on things outside itself Despite the claims of autonomy purity and control that architects like to make about their practice architecture is buffeted by uncertainty and contingency Circumstances invariably intervene to upset the architect s best laid plans at every stage in the process from design through construction to occupancy Architects however tend to deny this fearing contingency and preferring to pursue perfection With Architecture Depends architect and critic Jeremy Till offers a proposal for rescuing architects from themselves a way to bridge the gap between what architecture actually is and what architects want it to be Mixing anecdote design social theory and personal experience Till s writing is always accessible moving freely between high and low registers much like his suggestions for architecture itself
