Forest Service Decision Making A Framework For Improving Performance:

Forest Service Decision-Making Charles S. Cotton,1998 The Forest Service FS has spent 20 years and over 250 million developing multi year plans for managing national forests This report discusses the internal and external causes of inefficiency and ineffectiveness in the FS s decision making process the inadequate attention that the FS has given to improving the process the lack of agreement both inside and outside the agency on how it is to resolve the conflicts among competing uses on its lands unresolved interagency issues that transcend its administrative boundaries and jurisdiction and differences in the requirements of laws that help frame its decision making Charts and tables Forest Service Decision-Making U. S. General Accounting Office Staff,1998-01-01 Forest Service Decision-Making: A Framework for Improving Performance ,1997 The decision making process used by the Department of Agriculture s Forest Service in carrying out its mission is costly and time consuming and the agency often fails to achieve its planned objectives The agency has spent over 20 years and over 250 million developing multiyear plans for managing national forests It also spends about 250 million a year for environmental studies to support individual projects However according to an internal Forest Service report inefficiencies within this process cost up to 100 million a year at the project level alone In addition by the time the agency has completed its decision making it often finds that it is unable to achieve the plans objectives or implement planned projects because of new information and events as well as changes in funding and natural conditions In response to congressional requests GAO examined the Forest Service s decision making process In this report GAO discusses the internal and external causes of inefficiency and ineffectiveness in the process 1 the inadequate attention that the Forest Service has given to improving the process 2 the lack of agreement both inside and outside the agency on how it is to resolve conflicts among competing uses on its lands 3 unresolved interagency issues that transcend its administrative boundaries and jurisdiction and 4 differences in the requirements of laws that help frame its decision making General Technical Report NE ,1980 Oversight Hearing on U.S. Forest Service Strategic Plan Under the Government Performance and Results Act United States. Clark,1998-11 The Forest Service FS manages about 192 million acres of land about 9% of the nation s total surface area and about 30% of all federal lands This report discusses the lessons that can be learned from efforts by nonfederal land managers to generate revenue or become financially self sufficient from the sale or use of natural resources on their lands and legal and other barriers that may preclude the Forest Service from implementing similar efforts on its lands Contains a recommendation that would improve the FS s accountability for obtaining fair market value for goods recovering costs for services and containing expenses A Vision for the U.S. Forest Service Roger A. Sedjo,2015-09-25 Originally published in 2000 this title is a collection of engaging nontechnical contributions of scholars policymakers and forestry officials providing broad reflections on the agency's past and future contemporary perspectives about the use and stewardship of public lands and insightful analyses about the science involved in the practice of scientific management. The authors offer challenging ideas for evaluating the performance of the U.S. Forest Service, reshaping its mission, enhancing its effectiveness, improving internal morale, and increasing public participation in the agency. It is a valuable resource for policymakers, professional foresters, and any student interested in Environmental Studies.

Integrated Public Lands Management John B. Loomis, 2002-05-15 Integrated Public Lands Management is the only book that deals with the management procedures of all the primary public land management agencies: National Forests, Parks, Wildlife Refuges, and the Bureau of Land Management in one volume. This book fills the need for a unified treatment of the analytical procedures used by federal land management agencies in planning and managing their diverse lands. The second edition charts the progress these agencies have made toward the management of their lands as ecosystems. It includes new U.S. Forest Service regulations, expanded coverage of Geographic Information Systems, and new legislation on the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and National Wildlife Refuges.

USDA Forest Service Strategic Plan (2000 Revision) United States. Forest Service, 2000 Environmental Policymaking Michael T. Hatch, 2012-02-01 The methods employed in the pursuit of environmental protection are often highly contested, leading to alternative policy approaches. This book details the frequently neglected topic of these alternative approaches to environmental policymaking through case studies drawn primarily from the United States, Germany, and Japan. Among the policy instruments analyzed are eco-audits, voluntary agreements, tradable permits, green taxes, environmental impact assessments, and command and control regulations. Also examined are international regulatory arrangements to encourage sustainable forestry management practices. Various evaluative criteria are applied to each case study, including environmental effectiveness, economic and political efficiency, administrative efficacy, and technological innovation.
